Turn Your Sermon Into a Small Group Discussion Guide

WHEN TO USE

After you've finished writing your sermon for the week. Gives your small group leaders a ready- to-use guide that reinforces Sunday's message.

THE PROMPT

Help me with this ministry task: Turn Your Sermon Into a Small Group Discussion Guide.

Use the church profile and task details at the end. Work from the information I provide. If an essential detail is missing, ask up to three focused questions before drafting. Do not invent facts, quotations, statistics, stories, dates, policies, platform capabilities, or sources. Clearly label assumptions and anything that needs human verification.

Respect my stated theological tradition. Distinguish the biblical text from interpretation and application, and name meaningful differences between traditions when relevant.

I'm going to give you my sermon manuscript. Based on it, create a complete small group discussion guide with the following structure:

1. Opening Icebreaker (1 question, low-stakes, gets people talking - related to the sermon topic but not theological)
2. Key Scripture Passages (pull the 2-3 most important passages from the sermon, formatted with the reference)
3. Discussion Questions (6-8 questions that progress from observation to interpretation to application. Start with "What did you notice..." and end with "What's one thing you'll do this week...")
4. Going Deeper (1 optional question for mature groups that pushes into harder territory)
5. Prayer Focus (2-3 specific prayer prompts drawn from the sermon's themes)
6. Leader Notes (brief tips on where the conversation might stall or go off-track, and how to redirect) Keep the language conversational. These are for living rooms, not lecture halls. Avoid questions that have a single "right answer" - the goal is dialogue. Total length: 1 page front and back when printed. [PASTE YOUR SERMON MANUSCRIPT OR OUTLINE HERE]

TRY THIS NEXT

Paste the full manuscript, not your outline. The questions get twice as specific. Then reply: "Make a leader-only version with suggested answers and a timing plan."

Generate a Sermon Series Plan for the Next Quarter

WHEN TO USE

When you're mapping out your next teaching season and need a cohesive series arc with titles, scriptures, and weekly flow - instead of staring at a blank calendar.

THE PROMPT

Help me with this ministry task: Generate a Sermon Series Plan for the Next Quarter.

Use the church profile and task details at the end. Work from the information I provide. If an essential detail is missing, ask up to three focused questions before drafting. Do not invent facts, quotations, statistics, stories, dates, policies, platform capabilities, or sources. Clearly label assumptions and anything that needs human verification.

Respect my stated theological tradition. Distinguish the biblical text from interpretation and application, and name meaningful differences between traditions when relevant.

I need you to build a complete sermon series plan. Before producing your final output, think through these steps internally: (1) What is the felt need this series addresses for the average person in the pew? (2) What is the natural narrative arc - where should tension peak and where does resolution land? (3) How do the individual weeks build on each other without being repetitive?

Here's my input:

- Theme, book, or topic: [ENTER YOUR THEME, BOOK OF THE BIBLE, OR TOPIC]
- Number of weeks: [ENTER NUMBER OF WEEKS, e.g. 4, 6, 8]
- Congregation context: [BRIEFLY DESCRIBE YOUR CHURCH - size, demographics, anything relevant]

Deliver the following:

1. Series Title - punchy, memorable, sounds good on a banner. Provide 3 options ranked by strength.
2. Series One-Liner - a single sentence that sells the series to your congregation (think lobby poster copy).
3. Weekly Breakdown - for each week provide:
 - Week number and sermon title
 - Primary scripture passage
 - One-sentence summary of the message
 - The "so what" - the single takeaway for the listener
4. Series Arc Notes - 2-3 sentences explaining how the series builds momentum and why the weeks are ordered this way.
5. Promotion Angle - a short paragraph on how to pitch this series in announcements and social media. Make titles contemporary and intriguing - the kind that make someone think "I need to hear that." Avoid cliches and overly churchy language. Every title should work on a church app screen without needing explanation.

TRY THIS NEXT

Don't settle for round one. Reply: "Give me 10 more series titles, bolder." The title you actually use usually shows up in round two or three.

Find Fresh Illustrations for Your Sermon Point

WHEN TO USE

When your sermon point is solid but feels dry or abstract - you need a story, analogy, or example that makes it land emotionally and stick in memory.

THE PROMPT

Help me with this ministry task: Find Fresh Illustrations for Your Sermon Point.

Use the church profile and task details at the end. Work from the information I provide. If an essential detail is missing, ask up to three focused questions before drafting. Do not invent facts, quotations, statistics, stories, dates, policies, platform capabilities, or sources. Clearly label assumptions and anything that needs human verification.

Respect my stated theological tradition. Distinguish the biblical text from interpretation and application, and name meaningful differences between traditions when relevant.

Do not rely on unverified performance claims, current platform features, rankings, prices, statistics, or recent events. Ask for a source or label the item for verification.

I need fresh illustrations for a sermon point. Before generating options, first analyze: What is the core emotion this point should trigger? What misconception might the audience hold? What would make someone lean forward in their seat?

Here's my input:

- Main sermon point: [ENTER YOUR MAIN POINT IN ONE SENTENCE]
- Scripture reference: [ENTER THE SCRIPTURE YOU'RE PREACHING FROM]
- Target audience: [DESCRIBE YOUR CONGREGATION - age range, setting, cultural context] Provide exactly 5 illustrations, one from each category:

1. Personal Story Framework

- Don't invent a fake story. Instead, give me a specific scenario template I can adapt from my own life. Describe the setup, the tension, and the connection to the sermon point. Make it easy for me to swap in my real details.

2. Historical or Biographical

- A true story from history, a well-known figure, or a lesser-known person whose experience perfectly mirrors this truth. Include enough detail to tell it in 60-90 seconds.

3. Current Events / Modern Culture

- Something from the last 2-3 years that most adults would recognize. Explain the connection clearly so it doesn't feel forced.

4. Everyday Life

- A mundane, relatable moment (parenting, work, driving, grocery store) that becomes a perfect analogy. The kind that makes people nudge the person next to them.

5. Pop Culture

- A movie scene, TV show moment, book, or song that crystallizes the point. Include enough context that people who haven't seen it still get it. For each illustration, include: the story/analogy (told in 60-90 words), a suggested transition sentence into the point, and a rating of how broadly it will connect (niche vs. universal).

TRY THIS NEXT

If all five feel familiar, reply: "Give me five more from science, sports, and business history." The sharper your main point, the better the illustrations get.

Create a Sermon Outline from a Scripture Passage

WHEN TO USE

When you've chosen your text but are staring at a blank page. This gives you a complete structural framework so you can focus on filling in your voice and stories.

THE PROMPT

Help me with this ministry task: Create a Sermon Outline from a Scripture Passage.

Use the church profile and task details at the end. Work from the information I provide. If an essential detail is missing, ask up to three focused questions before drafting. Do not invent facts, quotations, statistics, stories, dates, policies, platform capabilities, or sources. Clearly label assumptions and anything that needs human verification.

Respect my stated theological tradition. Distinguish the biblical text from interpretation and application, and name meaningful differences between traditions when relevant.

I'm going to give you a scripture passage. Before building the outline, do this internally: (1) Identify the main theological truth of the passage. (2) Determine what the original audience needed to hear versus what a modern audience needs. (3) Find the natural divisions in the text. (4) Decide on the single "big idea" everything hangs on.

Here's my input:

- Target sermon length: [ENTER LENGTH, e.g. 25 min, 35 min, 45 min]
- Audience context: [DESCRIBE YOUR CHURCH - size, style, demographics]
- Any specific angle or emphasis you want: [OPTIONAL - leave blank if you want me to find the best angle] Deliver this structure:

1. Big Idea - the single sentence everything serves. If people forget everything else, they remember this.
2. Intro Hook (2-3 options) - an opening that creates tension or curiosity in the first 60 seconds. No "open your Bibles to..." starts.
3. Main Points (3 points, each with):
 - Point statement (clear, memorable, parallel structure if possible)
 - Supporting scripture within the passage
 - Explanation (what does this mean?)
 - Illustration placeholder (what kind of story would work here)
 - Application (what does the listener DO with this?)
4. Transitions - one sentence bridging each main point to the next
5. Closing - a landing that drives home the big idea with an emotional or action-oriented finish. No new information.
6. Call to Response - a specific, concrete next step you can invite people into [PASTE YOUR SCRIPTURE PASSAGE HERE]

TRY THIS NEXT

Once the outline lands, reply with your big idea in your own words and ask it to rebuild around that. You keep the authorship. It keeps the structure.

Polish and Tighten Your Sermon Manuscript

WHEN TO USE

When your sermon draft is done but feels long, clunky, or uneven. This acts as your personal editor - cutting the fat, strengthening transitions, and making every paragraph earn its place.

THE PROMPT

Help me with this ministry task: Polish and Tighten Your Sermon Manuscript.

Use the church profile and task details at the end. Work from the information I provide. If an essential detail is missing, ask up to three focused questions before drafting. Do not invent facts, quotations, statistics, stories, dates, policies, platform capabilities, or sources. Clearly label assumptions and anything that needs human verification.

Respect my stated theological tradition. Distinguish the biblical text from interpretation and application, and name meaningful differences between traditions when relevant.

I'm going to give you my full sermon manuscript. Perform a comprehensive edit following these steps in order:

Step 1

- Structural Scan
- Does the opening hook grab attention in the first 3 sentences? If not, suggest a stronger alternative.
- Are the main points clearly distinct or do they blur together? Flag overlap.
- Does the closing land with power, or does it fizzle? Suggest a stronger finish if needed.

Step 2

- Line-Level Editing
- Tighten wordy sentences. Cut filler phrases ("I just want to say," "The reality is," "Here's the thing"). Flag every instance.
- Shorten any paragraph over 5 sentences - spoken content needs shorter blocks.
- Flag any section where the energy dips or the argument stalls.

Step 3

- Spoken Word Check
- Flag sentences that would be hard to say out loud (too many clauses, awkward phrasing).
- Ensure tone is consistent - if it shifts from conversational to academic, note it.
- Check that humor (if present) is placed at natural tension-release points.

Step 4

- Delivery Suggestions
- Mark 2-3 moments where a strategic pause would increase impact.
- Identify the single most powerful sentence in the sermon and suggest how to deliver it. Output the edited manuscript with tracked changes (use [CUT], [REVISED], [MOVED] tags) plus a summary at the top listing: word count before/after, top 3 changes made, and overall strength rating (1-10). [PASTE YOUR FULL SERMON MANUSCRIPT HERE]

TRY THIS NEXT

Run it twice. After the first edit, reply: "Now cut another 10 percent without touching the stories." The second pass is where the fat comes off.

Write Sermon Bumper Copy for Screens and Bulletins

WHEN TO USE

After your sermon title and scripture are set. Gives your communications team ready-to-paste copy for every channel - so the sermon gets promoted consistently without anyone rewriting it five times.

THE PROMPT

Help me with this ministry task: Write Sermon Bumper Copy for Screens and Bulletins.

Use the church profile and task details at the end. Work from the information I provide. If an essential detail is missing, ask up to three focused questions before drafting. Do not invent facts, quotations, statistics, stories, dates, policies, platform capabilities, or sources. Clearly label assumptions and anything that needs human verification.

Respect my stated theological tradition. Distinguish the biblical text from interpretation and application, and name meaningful differences between traditions when relevant.

I need you to generate sermon promotional copy across multiple formats. Before writing, think through: What is the felt need this sermon addresses? What would make someone rearrange their Sunday to attend? What language avoids insider jargon?

Here's my input:

- Sermon title: [ENTER SERMON TITLE]
- Series name (if applicable): [ENTER SERIES NAME OR "standalone"]
- Key scripture: [ENTER PRIMARY SCRIPTURE REFERENCE]
- One-sentence sermon summary: [SUMMARIZE THE CORE MESSAGE IN ONE SENTENCE]
- Target audience vibe: [e.g., "young families," "mixed ages," "college town"] Deliver each of the following - every piece should be different in wording, not just truncated versions of the same copy:
 1. Lobby Screen / Digital Signage (15-25 words max - must work without context, displayed as a slide between announcements)
 2. Bulletin Blurb (40-60 words - printed in the Sunday program, slightly more detail)
 3. Church App / Website Description (75-100 words - for someone browsing your sermon archive or deciding whether to visit)
 4. Social Media Teaser (2 versions):
 - Version A: Question-led hook (for Facebook/Instagram)
 - Version B: Bold statement hook (for Facebook/Instagram) Both under 150 characters for optimal engagement. No hashtags.
 5. Email Subject Line (3 options - for a mid-week email promoting Sunday's message)
 6. Text/SMS Invite (under 160 characters - what a member could text to invite a friend) All copy should be theologically neutral enough to work across Protestant denominations. Avoid insider church language ("fellowship," "anointing," "season"). Write for the person who hasn't been to church in 6 months.

TRY THIS NEXT

Paste the copy from your last three sermon graphics as voice samples first. The output will match your church instead of generic church-speak.

Create a Children's Ministry Tie-In Lesson

WHEN TO USE

When you want Sunday's kids' lesson to reinforce the same theme adults are hearing in the main service - so families can have a real conversation on the drive home.

THE PROMPT

Help me with this ministry task: Create a Children's Ministry Tie-In Lesson.

Use the church profile and task details at the end. Work from the information I provide. If an essential detail is missing, ask up to three focused questions before drafting. Do not invent facts, quotations, statistics, stories, dates, policies, platform capabilities, or sources. Clearly label assumptions and anything that needs human verification.

Respect my stated theological tradition. Distinguish the biblical text from interpretation and application, and name meaningful differences between traditions when relevant.

I need a children's lesson that ties directly into this Sunday's adult sermon. Before creating the lesson, think through: How would a child experience this truth in their daily life? What concrete, sensory activity will anchor the concept? What language is age-appropriate without dumbing down the theology?

Here's my input:

- This Sunday's sermon topic: [ENTER THE SERMON TOPIC OR THEME]
- Key scripture: [ENTER THE PRIMARY SCRIPTURE REFERENCE]
- Age range: [ENTER TARGET AGE GROUP, e.g., "K-2nd grade," "3rd-5th grade," "preschool"]
- Available time: [ENTER LESSON LENGTH, e.g., "30 minutes," "45 minutes"]

Deliver the following:

1. Lesson Title - fun, kid-friendly, connected to the adult sermon title if possible
2. Big Idea - the sermon's main point translated into one sentence a child can repeat
3. Memory Verse - the key verse (or a simpler related verse for younger kids), with a suggested hand-motion or rhythm for memorization
4. Lesson Flow:
 - Opening activity (5 min) - a game or question that introduces the concept
 - Bible story time (8-10 min) - the scripture retold at the appropriate level with suggested voice/drama cues for the teacher
 - Main activity (10-15 min) - hands-on craft, game, or group activity that reinforces the point. Include a materials list.
 - Discussion circle (5 min) - 3-4 age-appropriate questions
 - Closing and prayer (3 min)
5. Take-Home Sheet Content - a short parent summary (2-3 sentences explaining what their child learned), the memory verse, and one family discussion question for the dinner table
6. Volunteer Prep Notes - what to set up before kids arrive, materials needed, and one tip for managing the tricky moment in the lesson

TRY THIS NEXT

Reply: "Now write a 60-second version of the Bible story a nervous first-time volunteer could read word for word." Then send it all to your kids' director as a draft.

Generate Worship Set Song Suggestions

WHEN TO USE When you're building your Sunday setlist and want songs that complement the sermon theme - with a purposeful energy arc instead of a random playlist.

THE PROMPT

Help me with this ministry task: Generate Worship Set Song Suggestions.

Use the church profile and task details at the end. Work from the information I provide. If an essential detail is missing, ask up to three focused questions before drafting. Do not invent facts, quotations, statistics, stories, dates, policies, platform capabilities, or sources. Clearly label assumptions and anything that needs human verification.

Respect my stated theological tradition. Distinguish the biblical text from interpretation and application, and name meaningful differences between traditions when relevant.

Do not rely on unverified performance claims, current platform features, rankings, prices, statistics, or recent events. Ask for a source or label the item for verification.

I need a worship set that flows intentionally into this Sunday's sermon. Before selecting songs, analyze: What emotional state should the congregation be in when the sermon starts? What theological themes in the scripture need to be echoed in the lyrics? Where should the energy peak and where should it settle?

Here's my input:

- Sermon theme/topic: [ENTER THE SERMON THEME]
- Key scripture: [ENTER THE PRIMARY SCRIPTURE REFERENCE]
- Desired energy arc: [DESCRIBE THE FLOW, e.g., "start upbeat and celebratory, build to a peak, then settle into reflective before the message" or "contemplative throughout"]
- Service style: [e.g., "contemporary," "blended," "hymns-forward," "Bethel/Elevation style"]
- Set length: [e.g., "4 songs / 20 minutes," "6 songs / 30 minutes"]

Deliver the following:

1. Recommended Set List - songs in order, for each song include:
 - Song title and artist/source
 - Why this song fits (1 sentence connecting it to the theme or arc)
 - Suggested key (if widely known)
 - Energy level (1-10 scale)
2. Set Flow Narrative - 3-4 sentences explaining how the set moves emotionally from opening to sermon transition
3. Transition Notes - between each song, a brief note on how to move from one to the next (instrumental transition, spoken word moment, prayer, etc.)
4. Alternate Picks - 2-3 backup songs in case your team doesn't know the primary picks, with notes on which song each one replaces
5. Post-Sermon Response Song - 1 suggestion for after the message, with a note on why it works as a response Prioritize songs that are widely known and congregationally singable - not just songs that sound good on an album. If suggesting newer songs, note their CCLI popularity ranking if possible.

TRY THIS NEXT

Paste your team's actual song library and add: "Only pick from this list." A familiar song your team can lead well is better than a perfect song they cannot.

PROMPT 09 - SERMON PREP & TEACHING

Build a Sermon Prep Research Brief

WHEN TO USE

At the very start of your sermon prep process. This gives you a research foundation in minutes - historical context, original language, cross-references, and commentary insights - so you can spend your prep time on application and delivery instead of digging through resources.

THE PROMPT

Help me with this ministry task: Build a Sermon Prep Research Brief.

Use the church profile and task details at the end. Work from the information I provide. If an essential detail is missing, ask up to three focused questions before drafting. Do not invent facts, quotations, statistics, stories, dates, policies, platform capabilities, or sources. Clearly label assumptions and anything that needs human verification.

Respect my stated theological tradition. Distinguish the biblical text from interpretation and application, and name meaningful differences between traditions when relevant.

Do not rely on unverified performance claims, current platform features, rankings, prices, statistics, or recent events. Ask for a source or label the item for verification.

I need a comprehensive but practical research brief for my sermon prep. Work through these layers systematically: (1) What did this text mean in its original context? (2) What have the major interpretive traditions said? (3) Where do modern scholars disagree? (4) What does this mean for someone sitting in a pew in 2026?

Here's my input:

- Scripture passage: [ENTER THE PASSAGE, e.g., "James 2:14-26"]
- Sermon topic or angle (if you have one): [ENTER YOUR ANGLE OR "open - help me find the best angle"]
- Your denomination/tradition (optional): [ENTER OR LEAVE BLANK FOR BROADLY PROTESTANT] Deliver the following sections:

1. Historical & Cultural Context

- Who wrote this, to whom, when, and why? What was happening historically that shaped this text? (150-200 words)

2. Original Language Insights - 3-5 key Greek or Hebrew words that unlock meaning. For each: the word, transliteration, literal meaning, and why it matters for preaching. No jargon - explain it like you're talking to a sharp pastor, not a seminary classroom.

3. Cross-References - 5-7 passages that illuminate this text. For each, one sentence on the connection.

4. Common Misinterpretations - 2-3 ways this passage is frequently misread or misapplied, and the corrective.

5. Key Commentator Perspectives - summarize 3-4 major commentary viewpoints (e.g., Calvin, Wright, Keller, Fee - pick whoever is most relevant). Note where they agree and disagree.

6. Application Angles - 4-5 directions you could take this passage for a modern audience. For each, a one-sentence sermon idea.

7. Quotable Line - one scholarly or classic quote about this passage that could be used verbatim in a sermon.

TRY THIS NEXT

Before you preach any quote, stat, or language claim from the brief, reply: "Give me the source for each claim above" and verify the ones you plan to use.

PROMPT 10 - SERMON PREP & TEACHING

Create a Sermon-Based Devotional for the Week

WHEN TO USE

After Sunday's sermon is preached. Extend the message into your congregation's week with a 5-day devotional you can email, post in your app, or print for your lobby.

THE PROMPT

Help me with this ministry task: Create a Sermon-Based Devotional for the Week.

Use the church profile and task details at the end. Work from the information I provide. If an essential detail is missing, ask up to three focused questions before drafting. Do not invent facts, quotations, statistics, stories, dates, policies, platform capabilities, or sources. Clearly label assumptions and anything that needs human verification.

Respect my stated theological tradition. Distinguish the biblical text from interpretation and application, and name meaningful differences between traditions when relevant.

I'm going to give you my sermon manuscript or outline. Create a 5-day devotional (Monday through Friday) that extends Sunday's message through the week. Before writing, analyze: What are the 5 strongest sub- themes or application points in this sermon? How do they build naturally across a week - from reflection to action? Structure each day exactly like this: Day [Number] - [Day of Week]: [Devotional Title]

- Scripture Reading: [A specific passage - can be the sermon text or a supporting passage, 5-15 verses]
- Reflection: (exactly 150 words) A short devotional thought that connects the scripture to one aspect of Sunday's sermon. Write in second person ("you"). Be specific and personal, not generic. Each day should feel like a different facet of the same gem - connected but not repetitive.
- Application Question: One thoughtful question that prompts self-examination or action. Not a yes/no question - something that requires honest reflection. Also include:
 - Series Header - a title and one-sentence description for the devotional series (for email subject line or app listing)
 - Introduction (50 words) - a brief note to the reader framing the week's journey, referencing Sunday's message
 - Weekend Reflection - a brief Saturday prompt (2-3 sentences) that ties the whole week together and points back to community/church Tone: conversational, warm, gently challenging. Avoid academic language. Write as if you're sitting across from someone at a coffee shop. Each day should take 5-7 minutes to read and reflect on. [PASTE YOUR SERMON MANUSCRIPT OR OUTLINE HERE]

TRY THIS NEXT

Reply: "Format each day as an email with a subject line." Then schedule all five in your email tool Monday morning and the week is done.

Repurpose Your Sermon Into 5 Social Media Posts

WHEN TO USE Use this every Monday after you preach to turn one sermon into a full week of social content. Saves you from staring at a blank screen trying to figure out what to post.

THE PROMPT

Help me with this ministry task: Repurpose Your Sermon Into 5 Social Media Posts.

Use the church profile and task details at the end. Work from the information I provide. If an essential detail is missing, ask up to three focused questions before drafting. Do not invent facts, quotations, statistics, stories, dates, policies, platform capabilities, or sources. Clearly label assumptions and anything that needs human verification.

I'm going to paste my sermon manuscript (or detailed notes) below. Your job is to pull out the 5 strongest social media moments and create 5 different post types from this single sermon. [PASTE YOUR SERMON MANUSCRIPT OR DETAILED NOTES HERE] Before writing, identify: (1) the single most quotable line, (2) the most practical/actionable teaching point, (3) the most emotionally resonant story or illustration, (4) the biggest tension or question the sermon raises, and (5) the core transformation or takeaway. Now create these 5 posts: Post 1

- Instagram Carousel Outline: Write a 7-slide carousel. Slide 1: bold hook headline (under 8 words). Slides 2-6: one key point per slide with a short explanation (under 30 words each). Slide 7: CTA slide. Include design direction (colors, font mood, imagery style). Post 2

- Quote Graphic Text: Extract or lightly polish the most quotable line from the sermon. Keep it under 15 words. Provide the quote, a suggested background style, and a caption to pair with it (under 80 words, ending with a question). Post 3

- Short-Form Video Script Hook: Write the first 8 seconds of a talking-head video based on the sermon's most surprising or counterintuitive point. Provide 3 hook variations: a bold claim, a question, and a pattern interrupt. Post 4

- Story/Reel Prompt: Write a 30-second reel script using the sermon's best illustration or story. Include on-screen text cues, a suggested background music mood, and a CTA sticker idea. Post 5

- Engagement Question Post: Write a conversational post (under 100 words) that poses the sermon's central tension as a question to the audience. The goal is comments, not likes. End with a direct, easy-to-answer question. For all posts: keep the tone warm, conversational, and confident. Avoid churchy jargon. Write as if talking to someone scrolling during their lunch break, not sitting in a pew. Do not use hashtags.

TRY THIS NEXT

Come back Thursday and reply: "Two more posts from the same sermon, different angles." One sermon can feed two weeks if you keep the chat.

Write This Week's Instagram/Facebook Captions

WHEN TO USE Use this at the start of each week when you need 5 ready-to-post captions. Give it your topic or upcoming event and your church's vibe, and you'll get a full week of captions you can copy and paste.

THE PROMPT

Help me with this ministry task: Write This Week's Instagram/Facebook Captions.

Use the church profile and task details at the end. Work from the information I provide. If an essential detail is missing, ask up to three focused questions before drafting. Do not invent facts, quotations, statistics, stories, dates, policies, platform capabilities, or sources. Clearly label assumptions and anything that needs human verification.

I need 5 captions for this week.

Here's my input: This week's topic or event: [DESCRIBE YOUR TOPIC, SERMON THEME, UPCOMING EVENT, OR GENERAL FOCUS FOR THE WEEK] Our church's personality/voice: [DESCRIBE YOUR CHURCH'S TONE - e.g., "warm and welcoming, a little funny, like a friend giving advice" or "bold and prophetic, unapologetic, high-energy"] For each of the 5 captions, provide:

1. Hook (first line): This is the most important line. It must stop the scroll. Keep it under 12 words. Use curiosity, a bold statement, or an unexpected angle. This line appears before the "...more" cutoff, so it must stand alone.
2. Body (3-6 sentences): Expand on the hook. Use short paragraphs (1-2 sentences each) with line breaks between them. Vary the structure across the 5 posts - some should tell a mini-story, some should teach, some should challenge.
3. CTA (last line): A clear, specific call to action. Vary these across posts: ask a question, invite them to share, tell them to save the post, invite them to church, or ask them to tag someone.
4. Suggested posting day/time: Recommend the best day and time for each post based on typical church audience engagement patterns.
5. Platform note: Flag if the caption works better on Instagram vs. Facebook and note any adjustments.

Constraints: No hashtags. No emojis in the first line. Maximum 2 emojis per post. Keep each caption between 80-150 words. Avoid cliches like "Let that sink in" or "Read that again." Every caption should feel like it was written by a real person, not a content machine.

TRY THIS NEXT

Paste your three best-performing captions first and say: "Match this voice." Your page stops sounding like every other church page.

Create a Monthly Content Calendar

WHEN TO USE Use this at the end of each month to plan the next 4 weeks of content. Feed it your upcoming sermons, events, and holidays, and get a complete daily posting plan so you never wonder what to post.

THE PROMPT

Help me with this ministry task: Create a Monthly Content Calendar.

Use the church profile and task details at the end. Work from the information I provide. If an essential detail is missing, ask up to three focused questions before drafting. Do not invent facts, quotations, statistics, stories, dates, policies, platform capabilities, or sources. Clearly label assumptions and anything that needs human verification.

Do not rely on unverified performance claims, current platform features, rankings, prices, statistics, or recent events. Ask for a source or label the item for verification.

I need a 4-week content calendar. Here's what's coming up: Upcoming sermon series or topics: [LIST YOUR SERMON TITLES/TOPICS FOR THE NEXT 4 WEEKS] Upcoming events: [LIST ANY EVENTS - e.g., small group launch, volunteer appreciation, special service, community outreach] Holidays or observances this month: [LIST ANY - e.g., Easter, Mother's Day, back-to-school, National Day of Prayer] Platforms we post on: [LIST - e.g., Instagram, Facebook, YouTube] How often we post: [e.g., daily, 5x/week, 3x/week] For each day on the calendar, provide:

- Post type: (carousel, quote graphic, reel/short-form video, story series, text post, event promo, testimony, behind-the-scenes, engagement question)
- Topic/angle: One sentence describing the post
- Platform: Where to post it
- Caption starter: The first 2 sentences of the caption (the hook + setup)

Organize the calendar in a clear grid format, week by week. Balance the content mix so it follows a rough ratio: 40% sermon-related/teaching, 25% community/behind-the-scenes, 20% event promotion, 15% engagement/fun. Never stack more than 2 promotional posts in a row. Place your highest-effort content (carousels, reels) on Tuesday-Thursday when engagement peaks. Keep weekends lighter (stories, quotes). After the calendar, include a "Content Prep Checklist" listing exactly what photos, videos, or graphics need to be created for the month.

TRY THIS NEXT

Ask for the calendar as a table you can paste into Google Sheets, then put a name next to every row. Content without an owner doesn't get posted.

Write a Carousel Post That Teaches Something

WHEN TO USE

Use this whenever you want to create a swipeable Instagram carousel that teaches your audience something practical. Carousels get 3x the reach of single images, so use this weekly for your highest-value teaching content.

THE PROMPT

Help me with this ministry task: Write a Carousel Post That Teaches Something.

Use the church profile and task details at the end. Work from the information I provide. If an essential detail is missing, ask up to three focused questions before drafting. Do not invent facts, quotations, statistics, stories, dates, policies, platform capabilities, or sources. Clearly label assumptions and anything that needs human verification.

Do not rely on unverified performance claims, current platform features, rankings, prices, statistics, or recent events. Ask for a source or label the item for verification.

You are an Instagram content strategist who has designed 500+ carousel posts for faith-based accounts, consistently achieving save rates above 5% and share rates above 3%. You understand carousel psychology - how to hook on slide 1, maintain swipe momentum, and land a CTA that converts. Topic for this carousel: [ENTER YOUR TOPIC - e.g., "5 ways to pray when you don't know what to say" or "What to do when God feels silent" or "3 lies the enemy tells you about your calling"] Target audience: [DESCRIBE - e.g., "young adults 20-35 exploring faith" or "established church members going through a hard season"] Create a 7-10 slide carousel with the following structure: Slide 1 (Hook Slide): A bold, curiosity-driven headline under 8 words. This slide determines whether anyone swipes. Use a number, a question, or a counterintuitive statement. Also provide a subtitle line (under 12 words) that adds context. Include design direction: background color mood, font style (bold sans-serif for headline, clean serif for body), and whether to use an image or solid color. Slides 2-8 (Content Slides): One key point per slide. For each slide provide: a short headline (3-6 words), body text (20-35 words max - this is critical for readability), and a design note if a specific icon, illustration, or visual element would help. Each slide should feel complete on its own but create momentum to swipe. Use a mix of teaching, story snippets, and practical steps. Slide 9 or 10 (CTA Slide): A clear call to action. Options: "Save this for later," "Share with someone who needs this," "Come experience this in person - [church name], Sundays at [time]." Provide 2 CTA options. After the slides, provide: a caption to pair with the carousel (80-120 words, hook + value + question CTA), and 1 sentence of posting strategy advice for this specific topic. No hashtags.

TRY THIS NEXT

Reply: "List each slide as HEADLINE / BODY / DESIGN NOTE so I can paste it straight into Canva." Design time drops to minutes.

Turn a Bible Verse Into an Engaging Post

WHEN TO USE

Use this whenever a verse hits you during study, devotion, or sermon prep and you want to share it in a way that actually connects. Gets you 3 different post formats from one verse so you can pick the best fit or use all three across the week.

THE PROMPT

Help me with this ministry task: Turn a Bible Verse Into an Engaging Post.

Use the church profile and task details at the end. Work from the information I provide. If an essential detail is missing, ask up to three focused questions before drafting. Do not invent facts, quotations, statistics, stories, dates, policies, platform capabilities, or sources. Clearly label assumptions and anything that needs human verification.

Respect my stated theological tradition. Distinguish the biblical text from interpretation and application, and name meaningful differences between traditions when relevant.

You are a faith-based content creator and biblical communicator with 12 years of experience turning Scripture into social media content that resonates with both mature believers and spiritual seekers. You understand that simply posting a verse with a sunset background doesn't cut it anymore - the verse needs context, story, and connection to be engaging. Verse: [ENTER THE BIBLE VERSE REFERENCE - e.g., Philippians 4:6-7] Why you chose it: [BRIEFLY EXPLAIN - e.g., "I keep coming back to this verse during a stressful season of ministry and it's hitting different right now" or "This connects to Sunday's sermon about anxiety"] Your church's denomination or tradition: [OPTIONAL - e.g., non-denominational, Baptist, Methodist - this helps ensure theological alignment] Create 3 different social media posts from this single verse:
Format 1

- Story-Style Post: Open with a relatable, specific scenario (not a generic "we all struggle" opener - paint a vivid moment). Weave the verse in naturally as the turning point of the mini-story. Close with hope. 100-140 words. The verse should feel like a revelation, not a lecture. Format 2

- Teaching Post: Break the verse apart. Explain one thing most people miss or misunderstand about this passage. Provide brief historical or original-language context if relevant (keep it accessible, not academic). Help the reader see the verse with fresh eyes. 100-140 words. Format 3

- Conversational Question Post: Start with the verse, then ask 2-3 thought-provoking questions that help the reader apply it personally. The questions should be specific enough to generate real answers, not generic enough to get ignored. Close with an invitation to share in the comments. 60-90 words. For all 3 formats: include the verse text (use the translation that sounds most natural for social media - typically NIV or NLT unless the KJV wording is iconic). Avoid Christian cliches. Write for someone who might not go to church. No hashtags.

TRY THIS NEXT

Use all three formats in the same week, spaced out. The same verse from three angles reads like a theme, not a repeat.

Write Video Hooks for Short-Form Content

WHEN TO USE

Use this before filming any short-form video (Reels, Shorts, TikTok). The first 3 seconds decide whether anyone watches. This gives you 5 proven hook formats to test so you never start a video with a weak opening.

THE PROMPT

Help me with this ministry task: Write Video Hooks for Short-Form Content.

Use the church profile and task details at the end. Work from the information I provide. If an essential detail is missing, ask up to three focused questions before drafting. Do not invent facts, quotations, statistics, stories, dates, policies, platform capabilities, or sources. Clearly label assumptions and anything that needs human verification.

Do not rely on unverified performance claims, current platform features, rankings, prices, statistics, or recent events. Ask for a source or label the item for verification.

You are a short-form video strategist who has analyzed 10,000+ faith-based Reels, Shorts, and TikToks to identify what makes viewers stop scrolling in the first 2-3 seconds. You understand platform algorithms reward watch-through rate, and the hook is the single biggest lever. Video topic: [ENTER YOUR TOPIC - e.g., "Why young people are leaving the church" or "How to actually hear God's voice" or "The one thing killing your church's growth"] Key point or insight you want to deliver: [BRIEFLY EXPLAIN THE MAIN TAKEAWAY OF THE VIDEO] Target audience: [e.g., "pastors and church leaders" or "young adults exploring faith" or "Christian parents"] Write 5 different hooks for this video. Each hook must be under 8 seconds when read aloud at a natural speaking pace (roughly 18-22 words max). For each hook, provide:

1. The hook script: Word-for-word what to say on camera
 2. Hook type: Label it (Pattern Interrupt, Question, Bold Claim, Story Open, or Stat/Data-Based)
 3. Delivery note: How to say it - pacing, emphasis, facial expression, whether to pause
 4. On-screen text: What text should appear on screen during the hook (keep it to 3-6 words that reinforce the spoken words)
 5. Why it works: One sentence explaining the psychological trigger this hook uses
- Hook requirements:
- Hook 1: Pattern Interrupt - say something unexpected that creates a "wait, what?" reaction
 - Hook 2: Direct Question - ask something the viewer desperately wants answered
 - Hook 3: Bold Claim - make a confident, specific statement that demands attention
 - Hook 4: Story Open - start mid-story to create instant curiosity ("So I was sitting in the parking lot after service when...")
 - Hook 5: Stat or Data-Based - lead with a surprising number or research finding
- All hooks must feel natural and conversational, not clickbaity or manipulative. They should create genuine curiosity about a topic that matters. Rank the 5 hooks from strongest to weakest for this specific topic and explain your ranking.

TRY THIS NEXT

Film your top two hooks, not just one, and post both versions. Let the numbers tell you which instinct to trust.

Create Engaging Story/Reel Prompts for the Week

WHEN TO USE Use this every week to get 5 ready-to-film story and reel ideas. Each comes with a script, on-screen text, and interactive elements so you can just pick up your phone and go.

THE PROMPT

Help me with this ministry task: Create Engaging Story/Reel Prompts for the Week.

Use the church profile and task details at the end. Work from the information I provide. If an essential detail is missing, ask up to three focused questions before drafting. Do not invent facts, quotations, statistics, stories, dates, policies, platform capabilities, or sources. Clearly label assumptions and anything that needs human verification.

Do not rely on unverified performance claims, current platform features, rankings, prices, statistics, or recent events. Ask for a source or label the item for verification.

You are a social media content producer who has created story and reel strategies for 40+ churches, increasing their story view rates by an average of 65%. You understand that stories and reels require a different approach than feed posts - they need to feel spontaneous, personal, and interactive even when planned. This week's sermon topic or theme: [ENTER YOUR TOPIC OR THEME FOR THIS WEEK] Who typically appears on camera: [e.g., "the lead pastor," "our communications director," "rotating staff members"] Your church's tone: [e.g., "fun and casual," "warm and sincere," "energetic and bold"] Create 5 story/reel ideas for this week. For each one, provide:

1. Concept (1 sentence): What this story/reel is about and why it will resonate
2. Format: Talking head, B-roll with text, behind-the-scenes, poll/question, or mixed
3. Exact script (word-for-word): What to say on camera. Keep it under 45 seconds for reels, under 15 seconds per story slide. Write it conversationally - how a real person talks, not how a press release reads.
4. On-screen text: Exact text overlays to add, including placement (top, center, bottom) and timing
5. Interactive element: A specific poll, question sticker, slider, or quiz to include - with the exact wording. Interactive stories get 2-3x the engagement, so every story should have one.
6. Best day to post: Which day of the week and whether it's better as a story (24-hour) or reel (permanent) Content mix for the 5 ideas: - 1 should be directly tied to Sunday's sermon (a teaser before or a takeaway after) - 1 should be behind-the-scenes (staff, setup, prep - humanize the church) - 1 should be purely interactive (poll, this-or-that, Q&A prompt) - 1 should be a quick devotional or encouragement (under 30 seconds) - 1 should promote an upcoming event or next Sunday without feeling like an ad All content should feel like it was created by a friend, not a marketing department. Keep the energy warm and approachable.

TRY THIS NEXT

Batch-film all five in one 30-minute session right after Sunday teardown, while the building still looks alive.

Write a Testimony Spotlight Post

WHEN TO USE Use this when someone in your congregation shares their story and gives permission to post it. Testimony posts are the highest-performing content type for churches but they need to be polished, respectful, and emotionally compelling without being exploitative.

THE PROMPT

Help me with this ministry task: Write a Testimony Spotlight Post.

Use the church profile and task details at the end. Work from the information I provide. If an essential detail is missing, ask up to three focused questions before drafting. Do not invent facts, quotations, statistics, stories, dates, policies, platform capabilities, or sources. Clearly label assumptions and anything that needs human verification.

Protect confidential and identifying information. Use only details that I am authorized to share, recommend redactions when appropriate, and require human approval before anything is sent or published.

[PASTE THE ROUGH TESTIMONY NOTES, BULLET POINTS, OR TRANSCRIPT BELOW - include as much detail as the person has given permission to share] Before writing the post, analyze the testimony for:

- The "before" state (what life looked like before the turning point)
- The specific moment of change (not vague - what actually happened?)
- The "after" state (what's different now - be concrete)
- Any details that should be softened or generalized for privacy (addictions, specific people, legal issues, health details)

Now write the testimony post with this structure: Opening hook (1-2 sentences): Start mid-story at the most emotionally gripping moment. Do NOT start with "Meet [Name]" or "We want to share a testimony." Drop the reader into the tension. The struggle (3-4 sentences): Paint the "before" with enough specificity to be real but enough restraint to be respectful. Use sensory details - what did this feel like, look like, sound like? The turning point (2-3 sentences): What changed? Be specific. If your church played a role, mention it naturally - don't make the church the hero of someone else's story. The transformation (2-3 sentences): What's different now? Use concrete evidence of change, not just feelings. The invitation (1-2 sentences): Close with an open door - "If you're in that place right now..." or "This could be your story too." Include a soft CTA (visit this Sunday, DM us, come to the next event). Total length: 150-200 words. Write in first person if the testimony subject is comfortable with that, third person if not. Use their real first name only if they've given permission. Flag any details from the notes that you'd recommend omitting or softening, and explain why.

TRY THIS NEXT

Always get the person's approval on the final draft before posting. Then reply: "Turn this into a 15- second reel script" and you have two pieces of content.

Audit and Improve Your Church's Social Bio

WHEN TO USE Use this when setting up your church's social accounts for the first time, or quarterly to refresh them. Your bio is the first thing a visitor sees and most church bios waste it with insider language and zero clarity.

THE PROMPT

Help me with this ministry task: Audit and Improve Your Church's Social Bio.

Use the church profile and task details at the end. Work from the information I provide. If an essential detail is missing, ask up to three focused questions before drafting. Do not invent facts, quotations, statistics, stories, dates, policies, platform capabilities, or sources. Clearly label assumptions and anything that needs human verification.

[PASTE YOUR CURRENT BIO TEXT FROM EACH PLATFORM BELOW - label which platform each is from] Church name: [YOUR CHURCH NAME] City and state: [YOUR LOCATION] Sunday service time(s): [YOUR SERVICE TIMES] One thing that makes your church different: [WHAT WOULD A FIRST-TIME VISITOR NOTICE - e.g., "we're super casual, lots of young families" or "deep verse-by-verse teaching" or "incredible worship experience"] Website URL: [YOUR WEBSITE] First, audit the current bios. For each platform, identify:

- What's working (if anything)
 - What's missing or unclear
 - Insider language that would confuse a non-churchgoer (e.g., "Spirit-filled," "Bible-believing," "doing life together")
 - Wasted characters or space Then write optimized bios for each platform: Instagram Bio (150 characters max):
 - Line 1: Clear value proposition (what someone gets by following/visiting)
 - Line 2: Location + service times
 - Line 3: CTA with a reason to click the link
 - Suggest a link-in-bio tool if they aren't using one (Linktree, Stan Store, etc.) Facebook About Section (short description: 155 chars, long description: up to 500 chars):
 - Short: One compelling sentence that makes someone want to learn more
 - Long: Expand with who you are, who you serve, what to expect on a first visit, and how to get connected
 - YouTube Channel Description (up to 1,000 chars):
 - Hook line for search (what kind of content you publish)
 - Who it's for
 - Upload schedule
 - What to expect
 - Subscribe CTA
- For all bios: write for the person who has never set foot in a church, not the longtime member. Use plain language. Include relevant keywords naturally for searchability.

TRY THIS NEXT

Do your Google listing while you're at it. Reply: "Now write my Google Business Profile description in 750 characters." That's where visitors actually find you.

Create a Series Launch Announcement Campaign

WHEN TO USE

Use this 1-2 weeks before any new sermon series starts. A strong launch campaign builds anticipation and fills seats on week one. This gives you 4 ready-to-post pieces that create a countdown effect.

THE PROMPT

Help me with this ministry task: Create a Series Launch Announcement Campaign.

Use the church profile and task details at the end. Work from the information I provide. If an essential detail is missing, ask up to three focused questions before drafting. Do not invent facts, quotations, statistics, stories, dates, policies, platform capabilities, or sources. Clearly label assumptions and anything that needs human verification.

Do not rely on unverified performance claims, current platform features, rankings, prices, statistics, or recent events. Ask for a source or label the item for verification.

Write This Week's Church Email Newsletter

WHEN TO USE Use this every week to write your church email newsletter. Turns your sermon topic, announcements, and events into a short, personal email people actually open and read.

THE PROMPT

Help me with this ministry task: Write This Week's Church Email Newsletter.

Use the church profile and task details at the end. Work from the information I provide. If an essential detail is missing, ask up to three focused questions before drafting. Do not invent facts, quotations, statistics, stories, dates, policies, platform capabilities, or sources. Clearly label assumptions and anything that needs human verification.

You are a church communications specialist who writes emails that people actually open and read. You know that church newsletters fail when they read like a bulletin - just a list of announcements. The best ones feel like a personal note from someone who genuinely cares about the reader's week. Write a church email newsletter with these details:

- Church name: [YOUR CHURCH NAME]
- This week's sermon title/topic: [SERMON TITLE OR TOPIC]
- Key announcements (list 2-5): [LIST YOUR ANNOUNCEMENTS]
- Any special events coming up: [EVENTS OR "none"]
- Sender name: [PASTOR'S FIRST NAME] Structure the email as:

1. Subject line - 6-10 words, curiosity-driven, never clickbait. Avoid "This Week at [Church Name]" - that's the most ignored subject line in church email.

2. Personal opening (2-3 sentences)

- A warm, human thought connected to the sermon topic or the season of life. Not a greeting. A thought.

3. Sermon teaser (2-3 sentences)

- Create genuine curiosity about Sunday's message without giving it away. End with a reason to show up.

4. Announcements

- Each one gets a bold title, 1-2 sentences max, and a clear action step (register, sign up, show up). Most important first.

5. Closing

- Brief, warm, personal. Not "Blessings, Pastor Mike." Something real. Tone: Warm, conversational, like a text from a friend who happens to run a church. Keep the entire email under 300 words. No emojis unless the church culture calls for it.

TRY THIS NEXT

Keep a running note of small moments from your week and paste one in as the opening seed. That personal opening is the part people reply to.

Draft a Church-Wide Announcement

WHEN TO USE

Use this whenever you need to communicate something to your entire congregation. Gets you perfectly sized versions for email, bulletin, lobby screen, and verbal announcement in one shot.

THE PROMPT

Help me with this ministry task: Draft a Church-Wide Announcement.

Use the church profile and task details at the end. Work from the information I provide. If an essential detail is missing, ask up to three focused questions before drafting. Do not invent facts, quotations, statistics, stories, dates, policies, platform capabilities, or sources. Clearly label assumptions and anything that needs human verification.

You are a church communications director with 15 years of experience crafting messages that cut through the noise in busy church environments. You understand that the same announcement needs to work differently across four channels - and that most churches lose people by writing one version and awkwardly pasting it everywhere. Create a church-wide announcement using these details:

- What's happening: [DESCRIBE THE ANNOUNCEMENT]
- When: [DATE/TIME]
- Who it affects: [EVERYONE, SPECIFIC GROUP, ETC.]
- What they need to do: [ACTION STEP
- REGISTER, SHOW UP, RESPOND, ETC.]
- Any urgency or deadline: [DEADLINE OR "none"]
- Church name: [YOUR CHURCH NAME] Produce four versions:

1. Email version (80-120 words)

- Subject line included. Lead with why it matters to the reader, not the logistics. Put the action step in a clear, standalone line. Close with one sentence of warmth.

2. Bulletin insert (40-60 words)

- Scannable. Bold the key details (what, when, where). One clear sentence about what to do next. No fluff.

3. Lobby screen slide (15-25 words)

- Large-text friendly. One headline, one key detail, one action. Think billboard, not paragraph.

4. Verbal announcement script (30-45 seconds when read aloud)

- Conversational, not robotic. Open with a hook that makes people look up from their phones. Include the critical details and end with a specific, easy next step. For each version, lead with the benefit or relevance to the reader - not the logistics. Never open with a date. Tone should match a church that's warm, clear, and respects people's time.

TRY THIS NEXT

Read the verbal script out loud once before Sunday. If it runs past 45 seconds, reply: "Cut this to 30." Long announcements cost you attention for the next one.

Write a Welcome Email for First-Time Visitors

WHEN TO USE Use this to build (or refresh) your first-time visitor email sequence. Creates a warm welcome email plus two follow-ups that guide new visitors toward connection without being pushy.

THE PROMPT

Help me with this ministry task: Write a Welcome Email for First-Time Visitors.

Use the church profile and task details at the end. Work from the information I provide. If an essential detail is missing, ask up to three focused questions before drafting. Do not invent facts, quotations, statistics, stories, dates, policies, platform capabilities, or sources. Clearly label assumptions and anything that needs human verification.

Protect confidential and identifying information. Use only details that I am authorized to share, recommend redactions when appropriate, and require human approval before anything is sent or published.

[PASTE YOUR CHURCH INFO HERE - include: church name, 2-3 sentences describing your church's personality/vibe, Sunday service times, your main "next step" for visitors (e.g., connect card, newcomer lunch, small group), your church website URL, and the pastor or staff name signing the emails] Write a 3-email welcome sequence for first-time visitors: Email 1

- Send same day or next morning:
- Subject line that feels personal, not automated - 150-200 words max
- Acknowledge they visited without being over-the-top
- Mention one specific thing that makes your church feel like home
- Close with ONE low-pressure next step - not five links
- Tone: warm, genuine, like a real person actually typed this Email 2
- Send on day 3:
- Subject line that creates curiosity about this Sunday - 120-150 words max
- Share something valuable (a sermon clip, a devotional thought, an encouraging word) - give before you ask
- Gently mention the upcoming Sunday as a natural next visit
- Do NOT repeat announcements from Email 1 Email 3
- Send on day 7:
- Subject line that's honest and direct - 120-150 words max
- Offer one clear connection opportunity (small group, coffee with pastor, newcomer event)
- Acknowledge that finding a church home is a process - no pressure
- Include a personal P.S. line that feels human Across all three emails: Never use church jargon. Never say "we'd love to connect" without specifying how. Never feel automated. Match the church's personality described above.

TRY THIS NEXT

Forward Email 1 to a friend who doesn't go to church and ask if they'd reply. Then load the sequence into your ChMS so it runs without you.

Improve an Email or Letter Before Sending

WHEN TO USE Use this before sending any important email, letter, or written communication. Acts as your personal editor to improve clarity, warmth, and professionalism - and catches anything that could be misread.

THE PROMPT

Help me with this ministry task: Improve an Email or Letter Before Sending.

Use the church profile and task details at the end. Work from the information I provide. If an essential detail is missing, ask up to three focused questions before drafting. Do not invent facts, quotations, statistics, stories, dates, policies, platform capabilities, or sources. Clearly label assumptions and anything that needs human verification.

[PASTE YOUR DRAFT EMAIL OR LETTER HERE] Additional context (fill in what applies):

- Who is this going to: [AUDIENCE - e.g., entire congregation, a volunteer, a donor, staff team, a family in crisis]
- What's the goal: [WHAT YOU WANT THE READER TO DO OR FEEL AFTER READING]
- Anything sensitive about this situation: [CONTEXT OR "none"] Review this draft and provide:

1. Edited version

- Rewrite the full message with improvements to clarity, warmth, flow, and professionalism. Keep my voice and intent. Tighten any sentences that ramble. Replace any jargon or stiff language with plain, warm alternatives. Ensure there's a clear action step if one is needed.

2. Red flags

- List anything in my original that could be misread, sound cold, come across as passive-aggressive, create confusion, or accidentally offend. Be specific about what the problem is and why.

3. Subject line upgrade

- If this is an email, suggest 2-3 better subject lines that increase the chance it gets opened. Explain briefly why each works.

4. One-line verdict

- In one honest sentence, tell me the biggest improvement between my draft and your edit. Do not over-polish into corporate speak. Church communication should sound like a real human, not a press release. Preserve any personality in the original - just make it land better.

TRY THIS NEXT

For anything sensitive, add: "Read this as the most defensive person in the room and tell me what lands wrong." It catches what you can't see.

Write an Event Promotion Email Sequence

WHEN TO USE Use this whenever you have an upcoming church event that needs email promotion. Creates a 3-email sequence with send timing so you can schedule everything at once.

THE PROMPT

Help me with this ministry task: Write an Event Promotion Email Sequence.

Use the church profile and task details at the end. Work from the information I provide. If an essential detail is missing, ask up to three focused questions before drafting. Do not invent facts, quotations, statistics, stories, dates, policies, platform capabilities, or sources. Clearly label assumptions and anything that needs human verification.

You are a church event marketing strategist with 10 years of experience filling rooms for church events - from women's conferences to volunteer appreciation dinners. You know that one announcement email doesn't fill seats. A strategic sequence does. Write a 3-email promotion sequence for this event:

- Event name: [EVENT NAME]
- Date and time: [DATE AND TIME]
- Location: [WHERE - on campus, off-site, online]
- What it is (1-2 sentences): [BRIEF DESCRIPTION]
- Who it's for: [TARGET AUDIENCE - e.g., young adults, parents, whole church, men, women]
- Registration link or next step: [URL OR INSTRUCTION]
- Cost: [FREE, $AMOUNT, OR SUGGESTED DONATION]
- Church name: [YOUR CHURCH NAME]
- Key selling point - why should someone come: [THE REAL REASON THIS EVENT MATTERS] Create three emails: Email 1
- "The Announcement" (send 3-4 weeks before):
- Curiosity-driven subject line (not just the event name) - 150-200 words. Lead with the emotional payoff of attending, not the logistics
- Logistics in a clean, scannable block at the bottom
- One CTA: register or save the date Email 2 - "The Reminder" (send 10-12 days before):
- Subject line that adds new information or social proof - 120-150 words. Share a reason to attend they haven't heard yet - a speaker detail, a testimonial, a behind-the-scenes hook
- Create gentle urgency without being fake about it
- One CTA: register now Email 3 - "The Last Chance" (send 2-3 days before):
- Subject line with honest urgency - 100-120 words. Short, direct, final. Acknowledge this is the last reminder
- Address the #1 objection for your target audience (time, cost, "not sure it's for me")
- One CTA: register or just show up Tone across all three: enthusiastic but not hype-y. Church events should feel inviting, not like a sales funnel.

Write and schedule all three in one sitting. A sequence that's scheduled beats a better one you never got around to sending.

Create a Giving Update or Financial Transparency Letter

WHEN TO USE Use this quarterly (or whenever you need to communicate about church finances) to write an honest, encouraging giving update that celebrates generosity and builds trust without guilt. Anyone.

THE PROMPT

Help me with this ministry task: Create a Giving Update or Financial Transparency Letter.

Use the church profile and task details at the end. Work from the information I provide. If an essential detail is missing, ask up to three focused questions before drafting. Do not invent facts, quotations, statistics, stories, dates, policies, platform capabilities, or sources. Clearly label assumptions and anything that needs human verification.

You are a church stewardship communications consultant with 15 years of experience helping churches talk about money in ways that build trust and inspire generosity - not guilt. You know that most giving letters fail because they either sound desperate or read like a spreadsheet. The best ones tell a story about impact. Write a giving update letter using these details:

- Church name: [YOUR CHURCH NAME]
- Time period: [e.g., Q1 2026, Year-to-date, Last month]
- Current giving vs. budget: [e.g., "We've received $180,000 of our $200,000 Q1 budget" or "We're 12% behind budget"] - 2-3 wins funded by giving: [SPECIFIC THINGS GENEROSITY MADE POSSIBLE - e.g., "Sent 14 students to camp," "Hired a part-time youth director," "Served 200 families through the food pantry"]
- Upcoming financial need or goal: [WHAT'S AHEAD - e.g., building repair, new staff position, missions trip funding]
- Sender name and title: [WHO IS SIGNING THIS] Structure the letter as:

1. Opening (2-3 sentences)

- Lead with gratitude and a specific impact story. Not "Thank you for your faithful giving" - that's generic. Name something concrete that happened because people gave.

2. The honest update (3-4 sentences)

- Share the numbers clearly and simply. If you're behind, say so honestly without panic. If you're ahead, celebrate without coasting. Always frame numbers as "here's what this means in real impact."

3. What's ahead (2-3 sentences)

- Cast vision for the upcoming need. Connect dollars to lives. "$15,000" means nothing. "$15,000 sends every kid in our youth group to camp" means everything.

4. The ask (2-3 sentences)

- Clear, confident, non-apologetic. Giving is an invitation, not an obligation. Include a specific way to give.

5. Closing

- Personal, pastoral, brief. Express genuine partnership. Tone: Honest, grateful, vision-casting. Under 400 words total. Never guilt-driven. Never vague. Every number should connect to a human story.

TRY THIS NEXT

Have your treasurer verify every number before it goes out. Then reply: "Turn the wins into a 30- second verbal update for Sunday morning."

Write a Difficult or Sensitive Church Communication

WHEN TO USE Use this when you need to communicate hard news - a staff departure, controversy, policy change, building issue, or any situation where the wrong words could cause real damage. Gets you a clear, empathetic message plus a FAQ section.

THE PROMPT

Help me with this ministry task: Write a Difficult or Sensitive Church Communication.

Use the church profile and task details at the end. Work from the information I provide. If an essential detail is missing, ask up to three focused questions before drafting. Do not invent facts, quotations, statistics, stories, dates, policies, platform capabilities, or sources. Clearly label assumptions and anything that needs human verification.

Protect confidential and identifying information. Use only details that I am authorized to share, recommend redactions when appropriate, and require human approval before anything is sent or published.

Treat this as a planning draft, not legal, clinical, safeguarding, or crisis advice. Flag urgent safety concerns and sections that require a qualified local professional or denominational review.

Help me write a communication about this situation:

- What happened or is happening: [DESCRIBE THE SITUATION - e.g., staff member leaving, budget shortfall, building damage, leadership change, controversial decision, policy update]
- What has already been decided: [WHAT DECISIONS HAVE BEEN MADE]
- What is still being figured out: [WHAT'S UNKNOWN OR IN PROCESS]
- Who needs to hear this: [AUDIENCE - whole church, specific ministry, staff, parents, etc.]
- How will this be delivered: [EMAIL, VERBAL FROM STAGE, LETTER, MEETING, COMBINATION]
- Anything off-limits to share: [CONFIDENTIAL DETAILS TO AVOID]
- Church name: [YOUR CHURCH NAME]

Produce:

1. The main communication (200-350 words):

- Open with the headline - say what's happening in the first two sentences. Never bury the lead in difficult news.
- Acknowledge the emotions people will feel. Name them specifically.
- Explain what you can. Be honest about what you can't share and why.
- State what's being done - concrete next steps, not vague promises.
- Close with pastoral warmth and an invitation for questions.

2. FAQ section (4-6 questions):

- Anticipate the exact questions people will whisper in the parking lot.
- For each: write a clear, honest, non-defensive answer (2-3 sentences each).
- Include one question that addresses the hardest version of the concern.

3. What NOT to say

- List 3-5 phrases or approaches to avoid in this specific situation and explain why each one backfires. Tone: Calm, honest, pastoral. Never defensive, never dismissive, never overly corporate. This should sound like a shepherd talking to people they love - not a PR statement.

TRY THIS NEXT

Ask: "What questions does this raise that I didn't answer?" Then have one trusted leader read it cold before you hit send. Never ship hard news from a first draft.

PROMPT 28 - COMMUNICATION & WRITING

Draft a Thank-You Note for a Volunteer or Donor

WHEN TO USE

Use this weekly to write personalized thank-you notes that make volunteers and donors feel truly seen. Turns generic appreciation into specific, meaningful recognition.

THE PROMPT

Help me with this ministry task: Draft a Thank-You Note for a Volunteer or Donor.

Use the church profile and task details at the end. Work from the information I provide. If an essential detail is missing, ask up to three focused questions before drafting. Do not invent facts, quotations, statistics, stories, dates, policies, platform capabilities, or sources. Clearly label assumptions and anything that needs human verification.

You are a church leadership coach with 12 years of experience helping pastors build volunteer and donor retention through the power of specific, personal recognition. You know that generic thank-yous ("Thanks for all you do!") actually demotivate people over time - because they signal that leadership doesn't really notice what individuals contribute. Write a personalized thank-you note using these details:

- Person's name: [FIRST NAME]

- What they did: [SPECIFIC CONTRIBUTION - e.g., "Led worship for three services during our Christmas series," "Donated $2,000 toward the youth building fund," "Organized the entire back-to-school supply drive"]

- Impact it had: [WHAT THEIR CONTRIBUTION MADE POSSIBLE - e.g., "42 kids had supplies for the first day of school," "The team felt confident because rehearsals were excellent," "We hit our building fund goal two weeks early"]

- Any personal detail you know about them: [e.g., "She's a single mom with three kids," "He just retired and started volunteering full-time," "They've been serving quietly in this role for five years" or "none"]

- Your name: [SENDER'S FIRST NAME]

- Delivery method: [HANDWRITTEN CARD, EMAIL, TEXT, VERBAL] Write the thank-you note following these rules:

1. Open with their name and what you noticed - not "Dear [Name], thank you for..." Start with a specific observation that proves you were paying attention.

2. Name the impact

- Connect their action to a real result. People don't just want to feel thanked. They want to feel that what they did mattered.

3. Personal touch

- If you shared a personal detail, weave it in naturally. Acknowledge their sacrifice or context without being presumptuous.

4. Close with vision

- End by connecting their contribution to the bigger picture of what God is doing through your church. Length: 60-120 words for a card or text. 100-180 words for an email. Keep it tight - the best thank-yous are concentrated, not wordy. Never use the phrase "thanks for all you do." Every sentence should be specific to this person.

TRY THIS NEXT

Make it a Friday habit: three names, three notes, ten minutes. The prompt makes each note specific. The rhythm is what changes your culture.

Prepare Your Monthly Staff Meeting Agenda

WHEN TO USE Use this before your monthly staff meeting to create a focused, outcome-driven agenda that respects everyone's time and actually produces decisions.

THE PROMPT

Help me with this ministry task: Prepare Your Monthly Staff Meeting Agenda.

Use the church profile and task details at the end. Work from the information I provide. If an essential detail is missing, ask up to three focused questions before drafting. Do not invent facts, quotations, statistics, stories, dates, policies, platform capabilities, or sources. Clearly label assumptions and anything that needs human verification.

You are an executive pastor with a gift for running meetings that people don't dread. You know that most church staff meetings fail because they're either all announcements (could've been an email) or all discussion with no decisions (could've been a hallway conversation). Great staff meetings have clear outcomes. Based on the following inputs, create a 60-minute staff meeting agenda:

- Attendees/roles: [LIST STAFF AND THEIR ROLES]
- Top 3 things on your mind this month: [YOUR TOP CONCERNS OR PRIORITIES]
- Any wins to celebrate: [RECENT WINS OR "none yet"]
- Upcoming dates that need coordination: [KEY DATES NEXT 30-60 DAYS]
- Any unresolved issues from last month: [ISSUES OR "none"] Structure the agenda as:

1. Celebration (5 min)

- Start with a specific win. Name the person responsible. This sets the tone.

2. Scorecard check-in (10 min) - 3-4 key metrics to review (attendance trend, first-time visitors, volunteer gaps, giving). Just the numbers and one-line commentary.

3. Discussion item #1 (15 min)

- The most important topic. Frame it as a question to answer or a decision to make, not just a topic to "discuss." Include the desired outcome.

4. Discussion item #2 (15 min)

- Same format.

5. Coordination (10 min)

- Upcoming dates, who owns what, any cross-department handoffs needed.

6. Action items & owners (5 min)

- Recap every commitment made with a name and deadline attached. For each discussion item, include a suggested "decision frame" - the specific question the team needs to answer by the end of that segment. End the agenda with a notes section template for capturing action items in real time.

TRY THIS NEXT

Send the agenda 24 hours early. Reply: "Write the email to my team with this agenda and the pre-read list attached." Prepared meetings run short.

Run a Strategic Planning Session for Your Team

WHEN TO USE Use this quarterly (or before a major planning retreat) when you need to step back from the week-to-week grind and align your team around priorities for the next 90 days.

THE PROMPT

Help me with this ministry task: Run a Strategic Planning Session for Your Team.

Use the church profile and task details at the end. Work from the information I provide. If an essential detail is missing, ask up to three focused questions before drafting. Do not invent facts, quotations, statistics, stories, dates, policies, platform capabilities, or sources. Clearly label assumptions and anything that needs human verification.

You are a church strategy consultant with 15 years of experience facilitating planning sessions for churches of every size. You know that most church strategic planning fails because it produces a 30-page document that sits in a drawer. Effective planning produces clarity, alignment, and a short list of commitments people actually follow through on. Based on the following inputs, create a complete 3-hour strategic planning facilitation guide:

- Current church size (weekend attendance): [NUMBER]
- Top 3 goals for the next 12 months: [LIST YOUR GOALS]
- Biggest barriers standing in the way: [LIST 2-3 BARRIERS]
- Number of staff/key leaders participating: [NUMBER] Structure the facilitation guide as:

1. Warm-up exercise (20 min)

- A specific icebreaker question that gets everyone thinking strategically, not just socially. Include instructions for how to facilitate the share-out.

2. Current reality check (30 min)

- A guided SWOT analysis (Strengths, Weaknesses, Opportunities, Threats) with 3 prompting questions per quadrant tailored to church ministry. Include a simple template they can fill in together.

3. Vision alignment (30 min)

- An exercise to confirm or refine what success looks like in 12 months. Have the team answer: "If we could only accomplish ONE thing this year, what would matter most?"

4. Priority-setting exercise (40 min)

- Take the goals listed above and run them through an impact vs. effort matrix. Provide the matrix template and instructions for ranking.

5. 90-day action plan (40 min)

- For the top 2-3 priorities, create a 90-day sprint plan with milestones at 30, 60, and 90 days, owners for each milestone, and specific deliverables.

6. Commitment and close (20 min)

- Each participant states their #1 personal commitment. Include a follow-up accountability structure. Keep the tone warm but focused. Avoid corporate jargon. Use church-appropriate language throughout. Include time stamps and facilitator notes for each section.

TRY THIS NEXT

After the session, paste your messy whiteboard notes back in and say: "Turn these into the 90-day plan with owners and dates." That's how the retreat survives Monday.

Evaluate a New Ministry Idea Before Launching

WHEN TO USE Use this whenever someone on your team (or in your congregation) pitches a new ministry, program, or event and you need a clear-headed way to evaluate it before committing resources.

THE PROMPT

Help me with this ministry task: Evaluate a New Ministry Idea Before Launching.

Use the church profile and task details at the end. Work from the information I provide. If an essential detail is missing, ask up to three focused questions before drafting. Do not invent facts, quotations, statistics, stories, dates, policies, platform capabilities, or sources. Clearly label assumptions and anything that needs human verification.

Do not rely on unverified performance claims, current platform features, rankings, prices, statistics, or recent events. Ask for a source or label the item for verification.

You are a seasoned executive pastor with 20 years of experience who has seen dozens of ministry launches - some that thrived and many that drained resources and burned out volunteers. You know the difference between a God-inspired idea and an enthusiasm-driven one is usually the quality of the evaluation that happens before launch. Based on the following inputs, create a thorough ministry evaluation framework:

- Proposed ministry/program description: [DESCRIBE THE IDEA IN 2-3 SENTENCES]
- Who proposed it and why: [PERSON AND THEIR REASONING]
- Estimated resources needed: [BUDGET, VOLUNTEERS, SPACE, TIME COMMITMENT]
- Your church's current capacity (honest assessment): [STRETCHED THIN / MANAGEABLE / HAVE MARGIN] Structure the evaluation as:

1. Mission alignment score

- Rate how directly this serves your church's stated mission. Ask 3 diagnostic questions: Does this reach people we're not currently reaching? Does this deepen discipleship for people already here? Does this replace something or add to the load?

2. Audience need validation

- Who specifically is this for? How do we know they need it? What evidence exists beyond one person's passion? Suggest 2-3 ways to validate the need before launching.

3. Resource reality check

- Itemize the true cost: money, volunteer hours per week, staff oversight time, facility needs. Compare against what's currently available. Flag any "robbing Peter to pay Paul" risks.

4. Success metrics

- Define 3-4 specific, measurable indicators that would tell you this ministry is working at 90 days, 6 months, and 1 year. Avoid vague metrics like "people are blessed."
- 5. 90-day pilot plan
- Design a minimal viable version that tests the concept without full commitment. Include a launch date, check-in dates, and who owns each piece.

6. Kill criteria

- Define in advance what would cause you to pause or shut this down. This is the hardest part, but it protects your church from zombie ministries that nobody has the courage to end. Be honest and direct. It's better to kill a mediocre idea early than to let it slowly drain your best volunteers.

TRY THIS NEXT

Share the kill criteria with whoever pitched the idea before you launch. It turns a future awkward conversation into an agreement you both made.

PROMPT 32 - LEADERSHIP & STRATEGY

Create a One-Page Vision Document

WHEN TO USE

Use this annually or whenever your church needs to re-articulate where it's headed - for a capital campaign, a new season, a staff retreat, or when things feel directionless.

THE PROMPT

Help me with this ministry task: Create a One-Page Vision Document.

Use the church profile and task details at the end. Work from the information I provide. If an essential detail is missing, ask up to three focused questions before drafting. Do not invent facts, quotations, statistics, stories, dates, policies, platform capabilities, or sources. Clearly label assumptions and anything that needs human verification.

You are a church communications strategist and former teaching pastor with 18 years of experience helping churches articulate vision in a way that actually moves people to action. You know that most vision documents fail because they're either too vague ("We want to reach our community") or too long (nobody reads past page one). The best vision fits on a single page and makes people feel something. Based on the following inputs, create a one-page vision document:

- Church name and denomination/tradition: [CHURCH NAME AND TRADITION]
- Mission statement (if you have one): [MISSION STATEMENT OR "we need help with this too"]
- Core values (list 3-5): [YOUR VALUES]
- Current reality (honest snapshot): [ATTENDANCE, TRENDS, MORALE, KEY CHALLENGES] - 3-year dream (what does the future look like if things go well): [DESCRIBE YOUR DREAM] Structure the one-page vision document with:

1. Compelling narrative opening (2-3 sentences)

- A vivid picture of what your church looks like 3 years from now. Make it concrete and emotional, not abstract. Use sensory language: what do people see, hear, experience?

2. The gap (2 sentences)

- Honest acknowledgment of where you are today versus where you're going. This builds trust.

3. Three measurable vision goals

- Each goal should have a clear metric and timeline. Format: "By [date], we will [specific outcome] as measured by [metric]." These should stretch but not be fantasy.

4. "What this means for you" section

- Write a short paragraph (3-4 sentences each) for three audiences:
- For staff: How this vision shapes their priorities and what changes for them
- For volunteers: How they fit into this vision and why their role matters more than ever
- For the congregation: What they'll experience and how they can participate

5. One rallying statement

- A single memorable sentence that captures the whole vision. Something people can repeat from memory. Write in a warm, pastoral tone. Avoid churchy clichés. Be specific to this church - not generic enough to apply to any church in America. The entire document should fit on one printed page (roughly 500-600 words).

TRY THIS NEXT

Read the draft to one longtime member and one newcomer. If either can't repeat the rallying statement back, reply: "Five alternate rallying statements, shorter."

PROMPT 33 - LEADERSHIP & STRATEGY

Prepare for a Difficult Conversation with a Staff Member

WHEN TO USE

Use this when you need to address a performance issue, behavioral concern, role change, or any sensitive topic with a team member and you want to handle it with clarity and grace.

THE PROMPT

Help me with this ministry task: Prepare for a Difficult Conversation with a Staff Member.

Use the church profile and task details at the end. Work from the information I provide. If an essential detail is missing, ask up to three focused questions before drafting. Do not invent facts, quotations, statistics, stories, dates, policies, platform capabilities, or sources. Clearly label assumptions and anything that needs human verification.

Protect confidential and identifying information. Use only details that I am authorized to share, recommend redactions when appropriate, and require human approval before anything is sent or published.

You are a pastoral leadership coach with 20 years of experience helping senior pastors navigate the hardest part of ministry leadership: honest conversations with people you care about. You know that most pastors avoid difficult conversations until the situation becomes a crisis, and that avoidance always makes things worse. A well-prepared conversation can be both truthful and kind. Based on the following inputs, create a complete conversation preparation guide:

- Describe the situation: [WHAT'S HAPPENING THAT NEEDS TO BE ADDRESSED]
- Desired outcome of this conversation: [WHAT DOES SUCCESS LOOK LIKE AFTER THIS TALK?]
- Your relationship with this person: [HOW LONG, HOW CLOSE, ANY HISTORY]
- What you've already tried (if anything): [PREVIOUS CONVERSATIONS OR ACTIONS]
- Their likely emotional response: [HOW DO YOU THINK THEY'LL REACT?] Structure the conversation prep guide as:

1. Opening statement (write this word-for-word)

- A direct but compassionate opening that names the topic within the first 60 seconds. No long preambles. No "sandwich method." Just honest and warm. Start with relationship affirmation, then state the purpose clearly.

2. 3 key points to communicate

- The essential things they need to hear, stated clearly and specifically. For each point, include one concrete example or observation (not hearsay).

3. Questions to ask them - 4-5 open-ended questions that invite their perspective. These show you're not just delivering a verdict. Include at least one question about how they're really doing personally.

4. Potential responses and how to handle them

- Anticipate 3-4 likely reactions (defensiveness, tears, deflection, agreement) and write a brief response for each that keeps the conversation productive.

5. Clear next steps

- What specifically are you asking them to do differently? By when? How will you follow up? What support will you provide?

6. Follow-up plan

- Schedule a check-in within 2 weeks. Include what to document in writing after the conversation (for their protection and yours). Tone should be firm but pastoral. This person is made in God's image and deserves directness, not manipulation. Never suggest scripted language that feels passive-aggressive or corporate. Keep it human.

TRY THIS NEXT

Keep real names out of AI tools. Use roles like "our worship leader." Then practice the opening line out loud twice. The first sentence carries the whole meeting.

PROMPT 34 - LEADERSHIP & STRATEGY

Write Your Weekly Leadership Reflection

WHEN TO USE

Use this at the end of each week to process what happened, capture lessons before you forget them, and set intentional priorities for the week ahead instead of just reacting.

THE PROMPT

Help me with this ministry task: Write Your Weekly Leadership Reflection.

Use the church profile and task details at the end. Work from the information I provide. If an essential detail is missing, ask up to three focused questions before drafting. Do not invent facts, quotations, statistics, stories, dates, policies, platform capabilities, or sources. Clearly label assumptions and anything that needs human verification.

You are a pastoral executive coach with 15 years of experience helping senior pastors develop the discipline of reflective leadership. You know that most pastors run from Sunday to Sunday without ever stopping to ask "What am I learning?" and that this lack of reflection is why the same problems repeat. The best leaders you've coached all share one habit: they write weekly. Based on the following inputs, create a structured weekly leadership reflection:

- This week's highlights (what went well): [LIST 2-3 HIGHLIGHTS]
- This week's frustrations (what drained you): [LIST 2-3 FRUSTRATIONS]
- Key decisions you made this week: [LIST ANY DECISIONS, BIG OR SMALL]
- Something you observed about your team or church: [AN OBSERVATION]
- How you're doing personally (energy, motivation, spiritual life): [HONEST ASSESSMENT] Structure the reflection as:

1. Wins to celebrate

- Take each highlight and articulate why it mattered, not just what happened. Who contributed? What can you learn from what went right? Include one specific person to thank or recognize this week.

2. Lessons from frustrations

- For each frustration, dig one layer deeper. Was this a systems problem, a people problem, or a "me" problem? What would you do differently? Is there a recurring pattern you're noticing?

3. Decision audit

- Review each decision: What information did you have? What did you not know? Would you make the same call again? This builds decision-making muscle over time.

4. Patterns to watch

- Based on this week's observations, flag anything that might become a bigger issue if unaddressed. Think about team dynamics, volunteer energy, congregational sentiment, or your own habits.

5. Top 3 priorities for next week

- Not a to-do list. Three outcomes that matter most. For each, identify one specific action you'll take Monday to move it forward.

6. One sentence prayer focus

- Capture what you most need God's wisdom for in the week ahead. Write in first person as if journaling. Keep the total reflection to 400-500 words. Be honest, not performative.

TRY THIS NEXT

Keep every reflection in one running doc. Each quarter, paste them all in and ask: "What patterns do you see across these twelve weeks?" That's where the insight hides.

PROMPT 35 - LEADERSHIP & STRATEGY

Develop a Ministry Health Dashboard

WHEN TO USE

Use this quarterly to build or refresh a simple tracking system so you can make decisions based on data instead of gut feelings - and catch problems early before they become crises.

THE PROMPT

Help me with this ministry task: Develop a Ministry Health Dashboard.

Use the church profile and task details at the end. Work from the information I provide. If an essential detail is missing, ask up to three focused questions before drafting. Do not invent facts, quotations, statistics, stories, dates, policies, platform capabilities, or sources. Clearly label assumptions and anything that needs human verification.

Do not rely on unverified performance claims, current platform features, rankings, prices, statistics, or recent events. Ask for a source or label the item for verification.

You are a church operations consultant with 15 years of experience helping churches move from "we think things are going okay" to actually knowing. You've seen that churches with even basic health metrics make better decisions, retain more volunteers, and catch declining ministries 6 months earlier than churches running on intuition alone. Based on the following inputs, create a ministry health dashboard:

- List of current ministries/programs: [LIST EACH MINISTRY - e.g., Kids, Youth, Worship, Small Groups, Outreach, etc.]
- Weekend attendance range: [AVERAGE NUMBER]
- Available data sources: [WHAT DO YOU CURRENTLY TRACK? ChMS, attendance software, giving platform, spreadsheets, nothing?]
- Who would maintain this dashboard: [ROLE/PERSON] Structure the dashboard as:

1. Recommended KPIs per ministry

- For each ministry listed, suggest 3-4 key performance indicators. Include:
 - One attendance/participation metric
 - One engagement depth metric (not just showing up, but going deeper)
 - One growth/new people metric
 - One volunteer health metric (ratio of volunteers to participants, tenure, burnout risk) Keep metrics simple enough to actually track with the data sources available.

2. Tracking cadence

- For each KPI, recommend whether to track it weekly, monthly, or quarterly. Explain why. Don't over-track - that kills the system.

3. Red / Yellow / Green thresholds

- For each KPI, define what "healthy" (green), "watch" (yellow), and "urgent" (red) look like. Use percentage changes, ratios, or specific numbers based on their church size. Be realistic, not aspirational.

4. Monthly review template

- A simple one-page template the dashboard owner can fill out each month. Include: top-level summary (how many greens, yellows, reds), 2-3 items needing attention, and recommended conversation topics for the next staff meeting.

5. Getting started plan

- If they're starting from scratch, give them a 4-week implementation plan to get the first version of this dashboard running. Week 1: gather existing data. Week 2: set up tracking. Week 3: first baseline readings. Week 4: first review. Keep it practical. A simple dashboard that gets used beats a complex one that gets abandoned. Suggest free or low-cost tools where possible.

TRY THIS NEXT

Start with three metrics, not fifteen. Reply: "Which three of these would catch a problem earliest for a church our size?" Track those for 90 days first.

PROMPT 36 - LEADERSHIP & STRATEGY

Create an Onboarding Plan for a New Staff Member

WHEN TO USE

Use this whenever you're bringing on a new hire - full-time, part-time, or even a key volunteer leader - so their first 90 days set them up for long-term success instead of confusion and isolation.

THE PROMPT

Help me with this ministry task: Create an Onboarding Plan for a New Staff Member.

Use the church profile and task details at the end. Work from the information I provide. If an essential detail is missing, ask up to three focused questions before drafting. Do not invent facts, quotations, statistics, stories, dates, policies, platform capabilities, or sources. Clearly label assumptions and anything that needs human verification.

You are a church HR consultant and former multi-site executive pastor with 18 years of experience. You've onboarded over 100 church staff members and you know that the first 90 days determine whether someone thrives or quietly starts updating their resume. Most churches have no onboarding plan at all - they hand someone a key and say "figure it out." That's how you lose good people. Based on the following inputs, create a complete 30-60-90 day onboarding plan:

- Role title and primary responsibilities: [ROLE AND KEY DUTIES]
- Start date: [DATE]
- Who they report to: [SUPERVISOR NAME AND ROLE]
- Team structure (who they'll work with daily): [LIST KEY TEAM MEMBERS AND ROLES]
- Key relationships they need to build: [IMPORTANT PEOPLE BEYOND THEIR DIRECT TEAM - board members, key volunteers, partner ministries]
- Anything unique about your church culture they should know: [CULTURE NOTES] Structure the onboarding plan as:

1. Before Day 1

- A checklist of what to prepare before they arrive: workspace, email, software access, welcome communication to the team, first-week schedule already on their calendar.

2. Week 1: Orientation and belonging

- Day-by-day schedule focused on meeting people, understanding culture, and feeling welcomed. Include specific meetings to schedule (supervisor 1:1, senior pastor intro, peer lunches). Goal: they feel like they belong.

3. Weeks 2-4 (Month 1): Learn and observe

- Weekly goals focused on understanding how things work. Include: systems to learn, meetings to attend, people to shadow, documents to read. Month 1 success criteria: 3 specific things they should be able to do or explain by day 30.

4. Weeks 5-8 (Month 2): Contribute and build

- Shift from learning to doing. Identify first projects to own, first meetings to lead, first decisions to make. Month 2 success criteria: 3 specific outcomes or milestones.

5. Weeks 9-12 (Month 3): Own and improve

- They should now be operating with confidence. Identify areas where they can start putting their stamp on the role. Month 3 success criteria: 3 indicators that they're thriving.

6. Check-in schedule

- Supervisor meets weekly for month 1, biweekly for months 2-3. Include suggested questions for each check-in. Add a 90-day review format that's constructive, not corporate. Tone should be warm and relational. Church staff onboarding should feel like joining a family mission, not processing into a corporation.

Build a First-Time Visitor Follow-Up Sequence

WHEN TO USE Use this after reviewing or rebuilding your visitor follow-up process - ideally quarterly - to ensure every first-time guest gets a warm, intentional sequence that moves them from anonymous visitor to connected attender.

THE PROMPT

Help me with this ministry task: Build a First-Time Visitor Follow-Up Sequence.

Use the church profile and task details at the end. Work from the information I provide. If an essential detail is missing, ask up to three focused questions before drafting. Do not invent facts, quotations, statistics, stories, dates, policies, platform capabilities, or sources. Clearly label assumptions and anything that needs human verification.

Protect confidential and identifying information. Use only details that I am authorized to share, recommend redactions when appropriate, and require human approval before anything is sent or published.

I need you to build a complete 5-touchpoint follow-up sequence for first-time visitors at my church. Here is our church information: [PASTE YOUR CHURCH INFO HERE - include: church name, city/region, denomination or style (e.g., non-denominational, Baptist, contemporary), average weekend attendance, your "next steps" path (e.g., newcomer lunch, growth track, small groups), and any specific ministries or programs you want to highlight to newcomers] Create these 5 touchpoints with exact, ready-to-send copy for each:

1. Immediate email (sent within 1 hour of service ending) - subject line + body, 120-150 words. Warm, zero asks beyond "we're glad you came."
2. Day 2 text message - under 160 characters. Casual, human, feels like it came from a real person.
3. Day 5 email - subject line + body, 150-180 words. Introduce ONE next step (your easiest on-ramp). Include a soft personal story or quote from a real-feeling member.
4. Day 10 email - subject line + body, 150-180 words. Address the #1 objection visitors have about returning ("I didn't know anyone"). Offer a specific connection opportunity with date/time.
5. Day 21 personal invitation - a script (80-100 words) for a volunteer or pastor to leave as a voicemail or send as a personal text. Name-drop something specific about the visitor's experience if possible. For each touchpoint, include:
 - The send timing and method (email, text, phone)
 - A "sender" recommendation (pastor, guest team lead, auto but personalized)
 - One A/B test suggestion to optimize over timeTone: Warm, genuinely excited, never desperate or guilt-driven. Write as if the sender actually remembers the visitor. Avoid insider church language - a person who has never attended church should understand every word.

TRY THIS NEXT

Load all five touchpoints into your ChMS automation this week. If email opens are weak, reply: "Rewrite this sequence as text messages only."

Write a "We Missed You" Email for Irregular Attenders

WHEN TO USE Use this monthly or whenever you notice regulars slipping away - people who attended 3-4 times then disappeared. This creates a re-engagement email that's warm and honest without laying on guilt.

THE PROMPT

Help me with this ministry task: Write a "We Missed You" Email for Irregular Attenders.

Use the church profile and task details at the end. Work from the information I provide. If an essential detail is missing, ask up to three focused questions before drafting. Do not invent facts, quotations, statistics, stories, dates, policies, platform capabilities, or sources. Clearly label assumptions and anything that needs human verification.

You are a church communications specialist who has written re-engagement campaigns for 150+ churches. You understand why people drift away from church - busy schedules, life disruptions, feeling disconnected, unresolved hurt - and you know how to write emails that re-open the door without making people feel guilty or tracked. Write a "We Missed You" re-engagement email and one follow-up email for my church. Church details:

- Church name: [YOUR CHURCH NAME]
- Tone preference: [CHOOSE: warm and casual / heartfelt and sincere / upbeat and energetic]
- What you can offer for reconnection: [e.g., "upcoming sermon series on ____", "new small group semester starting", "community event on [date]", "simply an open seat and a warm greeting"]
- Pastor or sender name: [NAME AND TITLE] For the primary email, write: - 3 subject line options (under 45 characters each, no clickbait)
- Body copy (150-200 words) that acknowledges the gap without being presumptuous about WHY they left
- A single, low-pressure call to action
- A P.S. line that feels genuinely human For the follow-up email (sent 7 days later if no response): - 2 subject line options
- Body copy (100-130 words) that takes a different angle - shorter, lighter, zero pressure
- Close with an open door statement that makes it clear there is no judgment Critical rules:
- Never say "we noticed you haven't been here" - it feels like surveillance
- Never guilt-trip ("the church needs you", "God is calling you back")
- Do address real reasons people drift: life got busy, Sundays filled up, felt disconnected
- Write at an 8th-grade reading level
- The email should feel like it came from a friend, not a CRM system

TRY THIS NEXT

Pull your list of people who came three or four times and vanished, then send this to ten of them as a test. Watch what gets replies before you scale it.

Create a Connection Card Follow-Up Workflow

WHEN TO USE Use this quarterly to build or refresh the workflow that turns connection card submissions into actual follow-up conversations. Especially valuable if your cards collect information but nobody has a clear system for what happens next.

THE PROMPT

Help me with this ministry task: Create a Connection Card Follow-Up Workflow.

Use the church profile and task details at the end. Work from the information I provide. If an essential detail is missing, ask up to three focused questions before drafting. Do not invent facts, quotations, statistics, stories, dates, policies, platform capabilities, or sources. Clearly label assumptions and anything that needs human verification.

Protect confidential and identifying information. Use only details that I am authorized to share, recommend redactions when appropriate, and require human approval before anything is sent or published.

I need you to create a complete follow-up decision tree and communication templates based on my church's connection card.

[PASTE YOUR CURRENT CONNECTION CARD FIELDS HERE - include every checkbox, text field, and dropdown. If you use a digital card, paste the form fields. Example fields: first-time guest, prayer request, interested in volunteering, want to join a small group, interested in membership, children's ministry info, etc.] Additional church context:

- Church name: [YOUR CHURCH NAME]
- Church size: [APPROXIMATE WEEKEND ATTENDANCE]
- Who handles follow-up currently: [e.g., pastor, admin, volunteer team, nobody] Build me:

1. Decision tree

- For each checkbox or response option on the card, define: (a) who is responsible for follow-up, (b) the timeline (within 24 hours, 48 hours, 1 week), (c) the method (email, text, phone call, in-person), and (d) what "done" looks like for that follow-up path.

2. Templates for each path

- Write a ready-to-use email or text template for every follow-up scenario. Each template should be 80-150 words, feel personal (not automated), and include one clear next step.

3. Priority tiers

- Rank the follow-up paths from highest urgency (e.g., prayer requests, first-time visitors) to lowest, so a small team knows what to tackle first on Monday morning.

4. Volunteer role description

- A brief (100-word) role description for a "Follow-Up Coordinator" volunteer who could own this workflow. Tone across all templates: Warm, specific, and action-oriented. Every message should feel like it was written by a real person who actually read the card. Avoid generic phrases like "we'd love to connect" - replace them with specific invitations.

TRY THIS NEXT

Print the decision tree and tape it where Monday follow-up actually happens. Then reply: "Turn this into a one-page training doc for my follow-up volunteer."

Design a "Next Steps" Pathway for New Members

WHEN TO USE

Use this annually or when launching a new member assimilation process. Ideal when you realize people join your church but never move beyond Sunday attendance into real community and service.

THE PROMPT

Help me with this ministry task: Design a "Next Steps" Pathway for New Members.

Use the church profile and task details at the end. Work from the information I provide. If an essential detail is missing, ask up to three focused questions before drafting. Do not invent facts, quotations, statistics, stories, dates, policies, platform capabilities, or sources. Clearly label assumptions and anything that needs human verification.

You are a church discipleship pathway designer who has built assimilation systems for churches ranging from 50 to 5,000 in attendance. You understand that most churches lose new members not because of bad teaching but because there is no clear, simple path from "I attend here" to "I belong here." Design a complete "Next Steps" pathway for new members at my church. Church context:

- Church name: [YOUR CHURCH NAME]
- Discipleship philosophy: [DESCRIBE IN 1-2 SENTENCES - e.g., "We believe growth happens in community through small groups and serving" or "We follow a classroom-based discipleship track"]
- Available programs/environments: [LIST - e.g., small groups, serve teams, membership class, mentoring program, ministry training, newcomer lunch]
- Current membership process: [DESCRIBE - e.g., "attend a 4-week class" or "meet with a pastor" or "we don't have one yet"]
- Church size: [APPROXIMATE WEEKEND ATTENDANCE] Create a 4-6 step pathway that includes:

1. Pathway overview

- A clear, visual-friendly sequence (Step 1 to Step 2 to etc.) with a short name and one- sentence description for each step. The language should make sense to someone with zero church background.

2. Timeline

- Realistic timing for each step. How long does each step take? What is the total journey from first visit to fully engaged member? Flag if any step creates a bottleneck.

3. Communication touchpoints

- For each step, define: what triggers the invitation to the next step, who sends it, and write a 60-80 word message template for that invitation.

4. Success metrics

- For each step, define one measurable indicator that tells you someone has completed it and is ready to move forward.

5. Drop-off recovery

- For each transition between steps, write a brief (50-70 word) re-engagement message for people who stall. Make the pathway feel like a journey someone would want to take - not a funnel they are being pushed through. Use plain language. Each step should answer the new member's unspoken question: "What do I do now?"

TRY THIS NEXT

Reply: "Now give me the lobby-sign version: the whole pathway in 25 words." If it can't fit on a sign, it's too complicated to work.

Write a Personal Invitation to a Small Group

WHEN TO USE Use this whenever you or a leader needs to personally invite someone into a small group, class, or community. Especially helpful for introverted leaders or anyone who struggles to write invitations that don't sound like mass emails.

THE PROMPT

Help me with this ministry task: Write a Personal Invitation to a Small Group.

Use the church profile and task details at the end. Work from the information I provide. If an essential detail is missing, ask up to three focused questions before drafting. Do not invent facts, quotations, statistics, stories, dates, policies, platform capabilities, or sources. Clearly label assumptions and anything that needs human verification.

You are a small group ministry coach who has trained 500+ group leaders on personal invitation and follow-up. You know that the #1 reason people don't join a small group is not lack of interest - it is fear of the unknown. Your invitations are specific, empathetic, and designed to lower every barrier. Write a personal invitation to a small group for the following person:

- Person's name: [FIRST NAME]
- What you know about them: [ANYTHING - e.g., "new to the church, has two kids, works in healthcare" or "been attending 6 months, always leaves right after service" or "just say 'not much yet'"]
- Group details: [GROUP NAME, TOPIC OR STUDY, DAY/TIME, LOCATION (home, church, online), LEADER NAME]
- Your relationship to them: [e.g., "I'm their pastor", "I'm the group leader", "I'm a friend from church"] Create two versions: Version 1: Email invitation (120-160 words)
 - Open with something specific to them (not "Hey, hope you're doing well")
 - Mention the group naturally - what it is, when it meets, what the vibe is like
 - Proactively address the top 3 objections without being defensive: • "I won't know anyone" - normalize it, mention who else is in the group • "I'm too busy" - acknowledge their schedule, emphasize low commitment to start • "I'm not ready / I don't know enough" - make it clear this is for normal people, not Bible scholars
- Close with a specific, easy next step (not "let me know") Version 2: Text message (under 300 characters)
 - Casual, warm, sounds like a real friend texting
 - One clear ask Also provide:
 - A suggested follow-up message (50 words) to send if they don't respond within 5 days
 - One tip for the sender on what NOT to say in person when following up Tone: The invitation should feel like a friend saving you a seat - not a salesperson closing a deal.

TRY THIS NEXT

Send it from your personal number, not the church account. An invitation from a human gets read. A message from an institution gets skimmed.

Create a Sunday Experience Audit Checklist

WHEN TO USE

Use this monthly or quarterly to evaluate your church's guest experience from the parking lot to the follow-up email. Best done by having a volunteer or friend do a "secret shopper" visit and score each item.

THE PROMPT

Help me with this ministry task: Create a Sunday Experience Audit Checklist.

Use the church profile and task details at the end. Work from the information I provide. If an essential detail is missing, ask up to three focused questions before drafting. Do not invent facts, quotations, statistics, stories, dates, policies, platform capabilities, or sources. Clearly label assumptions and anything that needs human verification.

Do not rely on unverified performance claims, current platform features, rankings, prices, statistics, or recent events. Ask for a source or label the item for verification.

Treat this as a planning draft, not legal, clinical, safeguarding, or crisis advice. Flag urgent safety concerns and sections that require a qualified local professional or denominational review.

You are a church guest experience auditor who has conducted over 300 on-site evaluations for churches across the U.S. You assess every touchpoint a first-time visitor encounters - from the moment they search for your church online to the follow-up message they receive on Monday. You know what separates churches that retain 30%+ of visitors from those that lose 90%. Create a comprehensive 30-point Sunday Experience Audit Checklist for my church. Church context:

- Church size: [APPROXIMATE WEEKEND ATTENDANCE]
- Current guest experience pain points: [LIST 2-3 - e.g., "confusing parking situation", "nobody greets visitors", "no follow-up system", "children's check-in is chaotic", "website doesn't match the real experience"] Organize the checklist into these 6 sections (5 items each):

1. Digital First Impression (website, Google listing, social media - what they see before they visit)
2. Arrival & Parking (signage, parking, first human interaction, exterior impression)
3. Lobby & Pre-Service (welcome, wayfinding, children's check-in, seating, sensory experience)
4. The Service (how welcomed visitors feel during the service, clarity for newcomers, connection opportunities)
5. Post-Service & Departure (what happens when service ends, connection points, information availability)
6. Follow-Up & Digital (what happens Monday through Saturday - emails, texts, social media engagement) For each of the 30 items, provide:
 - The checkpoint - a specific, observable thing to evaluate (not vague like "is the lobby welcoming")
 - What good looks like - a concrete description of the standard to aim for (1-2 sentences)
 - Red flag indicator - a specific sign that this touchpoint is actively driving visitors away (1 sentence)
 - Quick fix - one actionable improvement that costs under $50 or is free (1 sentence)Format the checklist so it can be printed and used with a simple Pass / Needs Work / Fail scoring system. At the end, include a scoring guide: what score ranges mean (e.g., 25-30 = excellent, 18-24 = solid foundation, under 18 = urgent attention needed).

TRY THIS NEXT

Have someone who's never attended your church do the walkthrough. Staff can't see their own lobby. Buy them lunch and ask for brutal honesty.

Write a Baptism or Membership Follow-Up Sequence

WHEN TO USE Use this whenever someone takes a major faith milestone - baptism, membership, public commitment - and you want to celebrate it properly and channel that momentum into deeper engagement instead of letting it fizzle.

THE PROMPT

Help me with this ministry task: Write a Baptism or Membership Follow-Up Sequence.

Use the church profile and task details at the end. Work from the information I provide. If an essential detail is missing, ask up to three focused questions before drafting. Do not invent facts, quotations, statistics, stories, dates, policies, platform capabilities, or sources. Clearly label assumptions and anything that needs human verification.

You are a church engagement strategist who specializes in post-milestone follow-up. You have seen hundreds of churches lose momentum after baptisms and membership commitments because they celebrate the moment but have no plan for what comes next. Your sequences turn milestone energy into lasting engagement. Write a 3-email follow-up sequence for a major faith milestone at my church. Details:

- Milestone type: [CHOOSE: baptism / membership / public commitment of faith / completion of discipleship class / other: ____]
- Church name: [YOUR CHURCH NAME]
- Pastor or sender name: [NAME]
- What your church offers as "next steps" after this milestone: [LIST 2-4 OPTIONS - e.g., join a small group, serve on a team, start a mentoring relationship, attend a deeper discipleship class, share their story publicly] Write these 3 emails: Email 1: Celebration (sent same day or next morning)
 - Subject line (2 options) + body (130-160 words)
 - Tone: Genuinely celebratory - this is a big deal and the email should feel like it
 - Reference the specific milestone, affirm their courage, and make them feel seen
 - Include one small ask: share a photo, write a sentence about why they took this step (this creates content and deepens their ownership of the moment)
- NO next-step asks yet - just celebration Email 2: Check-In (sent 7 days later)
 - Subject line (2 options) + body (120-150 words)
 - Acknowledge that the week after a big commitment can feel anticlimactic or bring unexpected doubts
 - Normalize the "now what?" feeling
 - Share one brief, relatable story or quote from someone who felt the same way
- Introduce ONE next step - the lowest-barrier option from their list above Email 3: What's Next (sent 30 days later)
 - Subject line (2 options) + body (150-180 words)
 - Celebrate the 30-day mark
 - Present 2-3 clear next engagement opportunities with brief descriptions and specific start dates or contact info
 - Frame each option around the question: "What kind of growth are you hungry for?"
 - Close with an open invitation to meet with a pastor if they are unsure where to go next For each email, include a recommended sender (pastor, ministry leader, automated-but-personalized) and one tip to make it feel less automated (e.g., add a handwritten P.S., reference a specific detail from their milestone).

Prepare for a Counseling or Care Conversation

WHEN TO USE Before sitting down with someone facing grief, marital trouble, addiction, doubt, or personal crisis. Gives you a structured preparation guide so you walk in ready - not winging it.

THE PROMPT

Help me with this ministry task: Prepare for a Counseling or Care Conversation.

Use the church profile and task details at the end. Work from the information I provide. If an essential detail is missing, ask up to three focused questions before drafting. Do not invent facts, quotations, statistics, stories, dates, policies, platform capabilities, or sources. Clearly label assumptions and anything that needs human verification.

Respect my stated theological tradition. Distinguish the biblical text from interpretation and application, and name meaningful differences between traditions when relevant.

Protect confidential and identifying information. Use only details that I am authorized to share, recommend redactions when appropriate, and require human approval before anything is sent or published.

Treat this as a planning draft, not legal, clinical, safeguarding, or crisis advice. Flag urgent safety concerns and sections that require a qualified local professional or denominational review.

I have an upcoming care conversation and I need to prepare thoroughly. Before building my guide, think through: What is this person most likely feeling right now? What are they afraid I'll say? What do they actually need from their pastor versus a therapist?

Here's my input:

- Situation type: [ENTER: grief, marriage crisis, addiction, faith doubt, mental health, family conflict, abuse disclosure, financial crisis, or describe]
- What I know about the person and situation: [SHARE WHAT YOU KNOW - age, how long they've been in the church, family dynamics, what triggered this conversation, any previous conversations]
- My role: [e.g., "senior pastor," "associate pastor," "lay care team leader" - note: I am not a licensed counselor]
- Denomination or theological tradition (optional): [ENTER OR LEAVE BLANK FOR BROADLY PROTESTANT]

Deliver the following:

1. Pre-Conversation Heart Check - 3-4 reflection questions for ME before I walk in. Help me examine my own biases, assumptions, and emotional readiness for this conversation.
2. Opening Approach - exactly how to begin the conversation. Give me 2-3 opening sentences that communicate safety and presence without being awkward or formulaic. Avoid "So, tell me what's going on" - be more thoughtful than that.
3. Key Questions to Ask - 5-7 open-ended questions tailored to this specific situation type, ordered from least to most vulnerable. For each question, include a brief note on what to listen for in their response.
4. What to Listen For - specific emotional cues, phrases, or body language signals that indicate deeper issues, safety concerns, or readiness for next steps.
5. What NOT to Say - 5 specific phrases or approaches to avoid for this situation type, with a brief explanation of why each one causes harm. Include common Christian cliches that sound spiritual but cause damage (e.g., "God doesn't give you more than you can handle").
6. Scripture to Hold Lightly - 2-3 passages that speak to this situation. For each, include when it might be appropriate to share and when to keep it to yourself. Not every moment needs a Bible verse - sometimes presence is the ministry.

7. Referral Triggers - specific signs that this person needs a licensed professional (therapist, psychiatrist, addiction counselor, attorney). Include how to make that referral without making them feel rejected or passed off.
8. Closing the Conversation Well - how to end without false promises. A suggested closing that communicates ongoing care, a concrete next step, and a prayer approach (ask permission first - not everyone wants to be prayed over in a vulnerable moment).
9. Follow-Up Plan - specific touchpoints for the next 72 hours and 2 weeks. Include suggested text messages that check in without being intrusive.

TRY THIS NEXT

Read the guide, then leave it in the car. It's a map for your head, not a script for the room. Presence beats preparation once you're in the chair.

PROMPT 45 - PASTORAL CARE

Write a Hospital Visit or Illness Check-In Message

WHEN TO USE

When a church member is facing surgery, a serious illness, injury, or hospice situation. Gives you a text message before and after the visit, plus talking points for the visit itself - without cliches or toxic positivity.

THE PROMPT

Help me with this ministry task: Write a Hospital Visit or Illness Check-In Message.

Use the church profile and task details at the end. Work from the information I provide. If an essential detail is missing, ask up to three focused questions before drafting. Do not invent facts, quotations, statistics, stories, dates, policies, platform capabilities, or sources. Clearly label assumptions and anything that needs human verification.

Protect confidential and identifying information. Use only details that I am authorized to share, recommend redactions when appropriate, and require human approval before anything is sent or published.

I need to prepare for a hospital or illness-related visit. Before writing anything, think through: What is this person's emotional state right now - fear, exhaustion, anger, numbness? What do they need from their pastor that the medical team can't provide? What is the worst thing I could say?

Here's my input:

- Person's first name: [ENTER NAME]
- Situation: [ENTER: pre-surgery, post-surgery, cancer diagnosis, chronic illness, serious injury, hospice/end-of-life, mental health hospitalization, or describe]
- Key details: [SHARE WHAT YOU KNOW - timeline, prognosis if known, family situation, how long they've been a church member, anything relevant]
- Their general disposition: [e.g., "strong faith, usually upbeat," "private person, doesn't like attention," "angry and questioning God," "scared," or "I don't know"]
- Denomination or theological tradition (optional): [ENTER OR LEAVE BLANK]

Deliver the following:

1. Pre-Visit Text Message - a brief, warm text letting them know you're thinking of them and planning to visit. No pressure. Gives them the chance to say "not today" without guilt. Keep it under 3 sentences. Avoid: "Let me know if you need anything" (they won't) and "God is in control" (not helpful right now).

2. Visit Talking Points - not a script (hospital visits should never feel scripted), but 5-7 guiding notes for the conversation:
 - How to enter the room and read the situation in the first 30 seconds - 3-4 things to say that communicate genuine care without minimizing their pain - 2-3 questions that let them share as much or as little as they want
 - How to handle silence (it's not your job to fill it)
 - When and how to offer prayer - including what to do if they're not in a place for it
 - How to acknowledge the medical reality honestly without playing doctor or theologian
3. What NOT to Say - 5 specific phrases to avoid in this situation, with brief explanations. Include religious clichés that cause harm in medical settings (e.g., "God must have a plan," "At least it's not..." "You just need more faith").
4. Post-Visit Follow-Up Text - a message to send within 24 hours of the visit. Reference something specific from the conversation (leave a bracket for me to fill in). Keep it human, not pastoral. Under 3 sentences.
5. Ongoing Care Rhythm - a suggested schedule for continued check-ins over the next 2-4 weeks, including what to send or say at each touchpoint. Different cadences for different situations (acute vs. chronic vs. end-of-life).
6. Family Care Notes - 2-3 specific ways to care for the patient's spouse, children, or parents who are often overlooked during medical crises.

TRY THIS NEXT

Keep the visit short even when it's going well. Twenty minutes of real presence serves a tired patient better than an hour of company.

PROMPT 46 - PASTORAL CARE

Draft a Sympathy or Condolence Message

WHEN TO USE

When someone in your church experiences a death. Provides a personal sympathy message plus follow-up messages for 1 week and 1 month later - because everyone shows up for the funeral and disappears after.

THE PROMPT

Help me with this ministry task: Draft a Sympathy or Condolence Message.

Use the church profile and task details at the end. Work from the information I provide. If an essential detail is missing, ask up to three focused questions before drafting. Do not invent facts, quotations, statistics, stories, dates, policies, platform capabilities, or sources. Clearly label assumptions and anything that needs human verification.

Respect my stated theological tradition. Distinguish the biblical text from interpretation and application, and name meaningful differences between traditions when relevant.

Protect confidential and identifying information. Use only details that I am authorized to share, recommend redactions when appropriate, and require human approval before anything is sent or published.

I need to write condolence messages for someone in my church. Before writing, consider: What is the specific shape of this grief? A parent losing a child is different from losing an elderly parent is different from losing a spouse suddenly. What does this person need to hear - and equally important, what do they NOT need to hear right now?

Here's my input:

- Person's first name: [ENTER THE NAME OF THE GRIEVING PERSON]
- Who they lost: [ENTER NAME AND RELATIONSHIP - e.g., "their mother, Susan" or "their 19-year-old son, Marcus"]
- Circumstances: [ENTER WHAT YOU KNOW - expected/sudden, cause if appropriate, any relevant details]

- Your relationship with them: [e.g., "they've been a member for 10 years and I know them well," or "newer member, I've only spoken to them a few times"]
- Anything specific about the person who died: [OPTIONAL - a memory, their role in the church, something that made them who they were]
- Denomination or theological tradition (optional): [ENTER OR LEAVE BLANK]

Deliver the following:

1. Immediate Sympathy Message - a personal, heartfelt message to send within 24 hours. This is not a card. It's a real message from their pastor. 150-250 words. Requirements:

- Name the person who died by name
- Acknowledge the specific loss (not generic "sorry for your loss")
- If I provided a memory or detail, weave it in naturally
- Do NOT say: "They're in a better place," "God needed another angel," "Everything happens for a reason," or "I know how you feel"
- Do NOT rush to theology. Sit in the grief with them first.
- Include a concrete offer (not "let me know if you need anything" - something specific)
- Close with genuine warmth, not a sermon

2. One-Week Follow-Up Message - sent 7 days after the death, when the casseroles have stopped and the house is quiet. 75-125 words. Acknowledge that this is often when grief hits hardest. Don't ask "how are you doing" - they're not doing well. Instead, offer presence.

3. One-Month Follow-Up Message - sent 30 days later, when everyone else has forgotten. 75-125 words. Name the person who died again (grieving people need to hear their loved one's name). Acknowledge that the world has moved on but their grief hasn't. Offer something specific.

4. Guidance Notes for Me - 3-4 brief pastoral notes about navigating this specific type of loss over the coming months, including common grief responses I should expect and how to avoid inadvertently causing harm.

TRY THIS NEXT

Put the one-week and one-month follow-ups on your calendar before you send the first message. The follow-through is the ministry.

Create a Prayer Guide for a Specific Situation

WHEN TO USE

When your church is facing a crisis, a member is going through a trial, or a world event shakes your congregation - and you need to lead people into prayer with more than just 'let's pray about it.'

THE PROMPT

Help me with this ministry task: Create a Prayer Guide for a Specific Situation.

Use the church profile and task details at the end. Work from the information I provide. If an essential detail is missing, ask up to three focused questions before drafting. Do not invent facts, quotations, statistics, stories, dates, policies, platform capabilities, or sources. Clearly label assumptions and anything that needs human verification.

I need a prayer guide for a specific situation our church is facing. Before writing, consider: What emotions are people bringing into this prayer time? What are they afraid to say to God? What theological questions are simmering under the surface? How do we pray honestly without losing hope - and hopefully without offering empty hope?

Here's my input:

- Situation: [DESCRIBE THE SITUATION - e.g., "a church member's child was in a serious car accident," "our community experienced a school shooting," "a family in our church is going through a devastating divorce," "a national crisis that's dividing our congregation"]
- Who will use this guide: [e.g., "I'll lead it from the pulpit," "small group leaders will use it," "it will be emailed to the congregation for personal use," "prayer team will use it during a special prayer meeting"]
- Tone and tradition: [e.g., "charismatic and Spirit-led," "liturgical and structured," "conversational and informal," or LEAVE BLANK for broadly accessible]
- Denomination or theological tradition (optional): [ENTER OR LEAVE BLANK]

Deliver the following:

1. Opening Words - a brief, honest acknowledgment of the situation (3-5 sentences). Not a sermon. Not a theological explanation. Just naming what's real. Give people permission to feel what they're feeling - including anger, confusion, and fear.
2. Scripture Anchors - 4-5 passages that speak directly to this situation. For each, include the full text (not just references) and 1-2 sentences explaining why this passage matters right now. Choose passages that sit with people in the pain, not just ones that rush to resolution. Include at least one lament passage.
3. Guided Prayer Sections - 5 structured prayer movements, each with:
 - A section title (e.g., "Honesty Before God," "Prayers for Those Suffering," "Asking for What We Need")
 - A brief introduction (2-3 sentences) framing this prayer focus - 3-4 specific prayer prompts - written as suggestions, not commands (e.g., "You might pray..." or "Consider asking God...")
 - At least one section must make space for lament - honest grief and even holy frustration. Not every prayer needs to end on a positive note.
4. Prayers for Specific People - tailored prayer points for those most directly affected (the person in crisis, their family, caregivers, the church community). Name the circles of impact.
5. Closing Encouragement - a brief, grounding paragraph that points toward hope without dismissing the pain. End with a specific, written-out closing prayer (50-75 words) that could be prayed aloud by a leader.

6. Ongoing Prayer Rhythm - a suggested structure for continued prayer over the following days or weeks (e.g., daily prayer focus, a scripture-a-day reading, a weekly prayer gathering format).

TRY THIS NEXT

Read it aloud once before you lead it. Any line you stumble on, reply: "Simplify this line for speaking, not reading."

PROMPT 48 - PASTORAL CARE

Prepare a Grief Support Group Session Plan

WHEN TO USE

When you're leading or launching a grief support group at your church. Gives you a complete 90-minute session plan with opening ritual, scripture, facilitation questions, and activities - designed for caring leaders, not licensed therapists.

THE PROMPT

Help me with this ministry task: Prepare a Grief Support Group Session Plan.

Use the church profile and task details at the end. Work from the information I provide. If an essential detail is missing, ask up to three focused questions before drafting. Do not invent facts, quotations, statistics, stories, dates, policies, platform capabilities, or sources. Clearly label assumptions and anything that needs human verification.

Respect my stated theological tradition. Distinguish the biblical text from interpretation and application, and name meaningful differences between traditions when relevant.

Protect confidential and identifying information. Use only details that I am authorized to share, recommend redactions when appropriate, and require human approval before anything is sent or published.

Treat this as a planning draft, not legal, clinical, safeguarding, or crisis advice. Flag urgent safety concerns and sections that require a qualified local professional or denominational review.

I need a complete session plan for a grief support group meeting. Before designing, think through: What emotional stage are participants likely in at this point in the series? What does the group need more of right now - structure or freedom? How do I create safety for the quietest person in the room while managing the person who dominates?

Here's my input:

- Session number: [ENTER SESSION NUMBER, e.g., "Session 3 of 8"]
- Topic focus for this session: [ENTER FOCUS, e.g., "anger and guilt," "holidays and anniversaries," "when faith feels empty," "learning to live with the loss," or describe]
- Group size: [ENTER APPROXIMATE NUMBER, e.g., "8-12 people"]
- Group makeup: [OPTIONAL - e.g., "mostly widows/widowers," "mixed types of loss," "parents who've lost children," "general"]
- Denomination or theological tradition (optional): [ENTER OR LEAVE BLANK] Deliver the following 90-minute session plan:

1. Arrival and Settling (10 min) - a specific opening ritual that creates continuity across sessions. Could be a candle lighting, a brief responsive reading, or a grounding exercise. Must be the same each week (with slight variation) to build safety. Write it out word-for-word so any facilitator can lead it.

2. Scripture and Reflection (10 min) - one carefully chosen passage that speaks to this session's topic. Not as a lesson - as a companion. Include a brief (2-3 minute) reflection to read aloud that connects the passage to the experience of grief. Avoid tidy theological conclusions.

3. Facilitation Questions (30 min) - 5-6 discussion questions designed for group sharing. Requirements:
 - Progress from safer (concrete, external) to deeper (internal, emotional)
 - Include at least one question that gives permission to voice the "unacceptable" feelings (anger at God, relief, guilt)
 - For each question, include a facilitator note: what to listen for, how to validate responses, and how to redirect if the conversation stalls or spirals
 - Include a "pressure release" question if the previous ones go deep - something lighter that lets people breathe
4. Activity (15 min) - a hands-on or reflective activity appropriate for this session's theme. Could be journaling, a creative exercise, a symbolic act, or a paired sharing exercise. Must be accessible to people who aren't comfortable with crafts or writing. Include step-by-step instructions and all materials needed.
5. Check-Out and Closing (10 min) - a structured closing that lets each person share one word or sentence about how they're leaving. Include a closing prayer written out word-for-word.
6. Between-Session Resource - one thing participants can take home: a prayer, a short reading, a journaling prompt, or a practical grief tool. Keep it to half a page.
7. Facilitator Self-Care Note - 3-4 sentences reminding the leader to debrief and care for themselves. Include one specific practice. Buffer time: The remaining 15 minutes are intentionally unstructured - note where flexibility should go if the conversation runs long or the group needs more space.

TRY THIS NEXT

Use the same opening ritual every single week, even when it feels repetitive to you. The repetition is what makes the room feel safe.

PROMPT 49 - PASTORAL CARE

Write a Pastoral Response to a Difficult Question

WHEN TO USE

When someone asks you one of those impossible questions - 'Why does God allow suffering?', 'Is my loved one in heaven?', 'Why didn't God heal them?' - and you need a compassionate response framework, not a theology lecture.

THE PROMPT

Help me with this ministry task: Write a Pastoral Response to a Difficult Question.

Use the church profile and task details at the end. Work from the information I provide. If an essential detail is missing, ask up to three focused questions before drafting. Do not invent facts, quotations, statistics, stories, dates, policies, platform capabilities, or sources. Clearly label assumptions and anything that needs human verification.

Respect my stated theological tradition. Distinguish the biblical text from interpretation and application, and name meaningful differences between traditions when relevant.

Protect confidential and identifying information. Use only details that I am authorized to share, recommend redactions when appropriate, and require human approval before anything is sent or published.

Someone in my church has asked me a difficult theological or existential question. Before crafting a response framework, think deeply: What is the emotional reality underneath this question? What pain or fear is driving it? What answer would cause the most harm? What does this person need from me that a Google search or a theology book can't provide?

Here's my input:

- The question they asked: [ENTER THE EXACT QUESTION, e.g., "Why did God let my daughter die?" or "Is suicide an unforgivable sin?" or "How can I believe in God when the world is this broken?"]

- Context - who is asking: [DESCRIBE THE PERSON AND SITUATION - e.g., "a father who lost his teenage daughter 3 months ago, lifelong church member, faith is shaking," or "a college student home for the summer, wrestling with doubt"]

- Your denomination or theological tradition (optional): [ENTER OR LEAVE BLANK]

Deliver the following:

1. The Question Behind the Question - your analysis of what this person is really asking, what they're feeling, and what they need from their pastor. 3-5 sentences.
2. What NOT to Say - 5 specific responses to avoid, with a brief explanation of why each one is harmful in this moment. Include well-meaning Christian responses that sound right but land wrong.
3. Conversational Response Framework - not a script, but a structured approach to the conversation:
 - First: Validate - 2-3 sentences that honor the question and the pain behind it. No rushing to answers.
 - Then: Sit in the tension - 2-3 sentences that honestly acknowledge what we don't know. Give the person permission to have this question without losing their faith.
 - Then: Offer anchors, not answers - 3-4 grounding truths from Scripture and Christian tradition that speak to this question. Present these as handholds, not solutions. For each, explain how to share it without it sounding like a pat answer.
 - Finally: Point forward - 1-2 sentences about what comes next. Not resolution - but continued relationship and care.
4. Scriptures to Hold - 3-4 passages directly relevant to this question. For each, include the key verses and a note on how to share them (and when NOT to). Some passages should be offered; others should be kept in your pocket until the person is ready.
5. Follow-Up Approach - how to revisit this conversation in the days that follow. This question won't be resolved in one sitting. Include a suggested follow-up message and a recommended resource (book, podcast, or counselor) for the person to engage with on their own timeline.
6. Theological Guardrails - 2-3 brief notes on where different traditions handle this question differently, so you can be aware of your own tradition's lens and speak honestly about the breadth of faithful Christian thought.

TRY THIS NEXT

Use this to prepare, not to reply. Hard questions deserve coffee and eye contact, not a paragraph. Bring the anchors in your memory, not on paper.

Create a Care Team Check-In Schedule

WHEN TO USE

When you have multiple people in your congregation needing ongoing care and you need to organize your care team's efforts - so nobody falls through the cracks and the work is shared sustainably.

THE PROMPT

Help me with this ministry task: Create a Care Team Check-In Schedule.

Use the church profile and task details at the end. Work from the information I provide. If an essential detail is missing, ask up to three focused questions before drafting. Do not invent facts, quotations, statistics, stories, dates, policies, platform capabilities, or sources. Clearly label assumptions and anything that needs human verification.

Protect confidential and identifying information. Use only details that I am authorized to share, recommend redactions when appropriate, and require human approval before anything is sent or published.

I'm going to give you a list of people in our church who need ongoing care. Based on their situations, build a structured check-in schedule for our care team. Before creating the schedule, analyze: Which situations are most urgent? Who is at risk of being forgotten (especially those past the initial crisis)? How do we distribute the load so no single team member is overwhelmed? What type of care touchpoint is most appropriate for each situation?

Here's my input:

- Care team size: [ENTER NUMBER OF CARE TEAM MEMBERS AND THEIR FIRST NAMES]
- Scheduling period: [ENTER TIMEFRAME, e.g., "next 4 weeks," "next month," "next quarter"]
- Communication tools available: [e.g., "phone calls, texts, in-person visits, meal delivery" or describe what your team can do]

Deliver the following:

1. Care Priority Triage - categorize each person into one of three tiers:
 - Tier 1 (Crisis/Acute): needs multiple touchpoints per week - active grief, medical crisis, immediate life disruption
 - Tier 2 (Ongoing/Stable): needs weekly contact - chronic illness, extended recovery, ongoing hardship
 - Tier 3 (Maintenance/Long-term): needs bi-weekly or monthly contact - past crisis but still needs connection, lonely, aging

For each person, explain your triage reasoning in one sentence.
2. Check-In Calendar - a week-by-week schedule for the full period, assigning specific care team members to specific people with specific touchpoint types. Format as a clear table or structured list. Rules to follow:
 - Rotate team members so no one carries the same person every week (prevents compassion fatigue and unhealthy attachment)
 - Match touchpoint type to situation (a text is fine for Tier 3; Tier 1 needs calls and visits)
 - Front-load the first two weeks with more touchpoints, then taper to sustainable rhythms
 - Account for Sundays as natural in-person check-in opportunities
3. Template Messages - provide ready-to-use message templates for each touchpoint type:
 - Quick check-in text (2-3 sentences, warm but not intrusive)
 - Phone call opening and talking points (what to say, what to ask, how long the call should be)
 - Pre-visit text (letting them know you're coming)
 - Meal delivery coordination message - "Just thinking of you" note (for Tier 3 long-term care)

Each template should have a [bracket] for personalization.
4. Escalation Triggers - specific signs that a care team member should flag for the pastor: mentions of self-harm, sudden withdrawal, anger at the church, spiritual crisis, family conflict, or worsening medical situation. Brief guidance on how to report up without breaking trust.

5. Team Care Reminders - a brief section to share with the care team about boundaries, self-care, and the difference between pastoral care and professional counseling. Include 3 clear signs that a situation needs referral to a licensed professional.
[PASTE YOUR LIST OF PEOPLE NEEDING CARE HERE - include first names, situations, how long they've been in this situation, and any relevant notes]

TRY THIS NEXT

Protect privacy: first names only, no diagnoses, no details when you paste your care list into any AI tool. Keep the sensitive context in your head, not the chat.

Write a Volunteer Role Description That Actually Attracts People

WHEN TO USE

When you need to fill a volunteer position and want to attract the right people by leading with purpose and impact rather than desperation or guilt.

THE PROMPT

Help me with this ministry task: Write a Volunteer Role Description That Actually Attracts People.

Use the church profile and task details at the end. Work from the information I provide. If an essential detail is missing, ask up to three focused questions before drafting. Do not invent facts, quotations, statistics, stories, dates, policies, platform capabilities, or sources. Clearly label assumptions and anything that needs human verification.

I need a volunteer role description for my church:

- Ministry area: [e.g., Children's Ministry, Worship Team, Hospitality, Tech/AV, Parking Team]
- Role name: [e.g., Small Group Leader, Sound Technician, Greeter, Check-In Volunteer]
- Time commitment: [e.g., 2 hours every Sunday, one Saturday per month]
- Skills or qualities needed: [e.g., loves kids, basic audio knowledge, friendly personality]
- Training provided: [e.g., 2-hour orientation, shadow session, ongoing mentorship]
- Team size: [e.g., team of 8 rotating volunteers] Write a role description with these sections:

1. Role Title

- Clear and appealing, no churchy jargon

2. The Impact You'll Make (3-4 sentences)

- Lead with WHY this matters. Describe the real-world difference using a specific scenario.

3. What You'll Actually Do - 4-6 concrete responsibilities in active, energizing language. Honest but not overwhelming.

4. What We're Looking For

- Qualities and skills split into 'must-haves' and 'nice-to-haves.' Keep requirements accessible.

5. The Time Commitment

- Exact hours, frequency, trial period, minimum commitment. Be transparent.

6. What You'll Get

- Training, community, growth opportunities, tangible support (meals, childcare, etc.)

7. Your Next Step

- One clear, low-friction CTA like 'Text Pastor Mike' or 'Grab a coffee chat' Tone: invitational, never guilt-driven. Zero phrases like 'we desperately need.' Honest about the work, enthusiastic about the impact. 8th-grade reading level. Feels like a friend, not a corporate job posting. Denomination-neutral unless specified.

TRY THIS NEXT

Pair the role post with a photo and quote from a current volunteer. Reply: "Write three interview questions that will get me a great quote from my team."

Create a Volunteer Recruitment Campaign

WHEN TO USE

When you have a specific ministry area that needs more volunteers and want a structured multi-week campaign instead of a single desperate announcement from the stage.

THE PROMPT

Help me with this ministry task: Create a Volunteer Recruitment Campaign.

Use the church profile and task details at the end. Work from the information I provide. If an essential detail is missing, ask up to three focused questions before drafting. Do not invent facts, quotations, statistics, stories, dates, policies, platform capabilities, or sources. Clearly label assumptions and anything that needs human verification.

I need a 3-week volunteer recruitment campaign for my church.

Here are the details:

- Ministry area needing volunteers: [e.g., Children's Ministry, Guest Services, Production Team]
- Current gap: [e.g., We need 12 more volunteers to run two services without anyone serving every week]
- Timeline: [e.g., Campaign starts March 1, need people onboarded by April 1]
- Church size: [e.g., 300 average attendance]
- Current recruitment methods that aren't working: [e.g., stage announcements, bulletin inserts]
- Who is your ideal volunteer for this role: [e.g., parents of elementary kids, young adults, retirees] Create a complete 3-week campaign plan with these deliverables: Week 1
- Cast the Vision
- Stage announcement script (60-90 seconds, story-driven, ends with soft CTA)
- Email to full congregation (subject line + body, 150-200 words) - 2 social media posts (one story-driven, one FAQ-style)
- Behind-the-scenes video concept showing current volunteers in action Week 2
- Make the Personal Ask
- Script for current volunteers to personally invite one friend (word-for-word, 30 seconds)
- Script for pastors/leaders to use in personal conversations
- Follow-up email to people who expressed interest but haven't signed up
- Social media testimonial post template featuring a current volunteer Week 3
- Close the Loop
- Final stage announcement with urgency (not guilt) - 'Last chance' email with clear next step and deadline
- Personal text message template for warm leads
- Sign-up confirmation message + what-to-expect onboarding email Tone rules:
- Lead with impact and belonging, never guilt or obligation
- Specific over vague - name real scenarios, real impact, real people
- Every piece ends with ONE clear, low-friction next step
- Acknowledge that people are busy and this is a real commitment

TRY THIS NEXT

The Week 2 personal-ask script is the whole campaign. Print it and hand it to your current team on Sunday. Announcements inform. Friends recruit.

Write a Volunteer Appreciation Message

WHEN TO USE When you want to genuinely thank a specific volunteer in a way that feels personal and meaningful - not a copy-paste 'thanks for serving' that everyone gets.

THE PROMPT

Help me with this ministry task: Write a Volunteer Appreciation Message.

Use the church profile and task details at the end. Work from the information I provide. If an essential detail is missing, ask up to three focused questions before drafting. Do not invent facts, quotations, statistics, stories, dates, policies, platform capabilities, or sources. Clearly label assumptions and anything that needs human verification.

I need appreciation content for one of our volunteers:

- Volunteer's name: [First name]
- Role/ministry area: [e.g., leads 3rd-grade small group, runs soundboard, coordinates parking team]
- How long they've served: [e.g., 2 years, 6 months, since the church launched]
- Specific impact example: [e.g., A new family came back because their child loved the class. Stayed late to fix audio before Easter. Reorganized the entire check-in process.]
- Their personality: [e.g., quiet and dependable, high-energy, detail-oriented]
- Personal context: [e.g., serves despite a long commute, single parent, tough season recently] Create three pieces:

1. Personal Appreciation Message (card or DM, 100-150 words)

- Open with a specific moment you noticed, not a generic 'thank you'
- Name what they did and the ripple effect
- Acknowledge something personal about their sacrifice or character
- Close with what their presence means to the team

2. Social Media Spotlight Post (80-120 words)

- Scroll-stopping hook
- Brief story about their impact with tag-friendly format
- Ends with a line that inspires others to serve (not guilt) - 2-3 suggested hashtags

3. Annual Recognition Nomination (150-200 words)

- Board/awards-program appropriate
- Documents observable impact with a quote from someone affected by their service
- States why this person exemplifies volunteer values Across all three: avoid cliches like 'unsung hero' or 'servant's heart.' Be specific enough that this could only be about THIS person.

TRY THIS NEXT

Ask AI for the words if you're stuck, but write the card by hand. The ink is the message.

Build a Volunteer Training Outline

WHEN TO USE

When you're onboarding new volunteers or upskilling existing ones and need a structured training plan that actually prepares people instead of just handing them a manual.

THE PROMPT

Help me with this ministry task: Build a Volunteer Training Outline.

Use the church profile and task details at the end. Work from the information I provide. If an essential detail is missing, ask up to three focused questions before drafting. Do not invent facts, quotations, statistics, stories, dates, policies, platform capabilities, or sources. Clearly label assumptions and anything that needs human verification.

I need a volunteer training outline:

- Ministry area: [e.g., Children's Ministry, Audio/Visual, Hospitality, Worship Team]
- Specific role: [e.g., Small Group Leader, Camera Operator, Greeter, Backup Vocalist]
- Skill level: [e.g., brand new, some experience, transferring from another church]
- Available training time: [e.g., 2-hour Saturday session, 30 min before service for 4 weeks]
- Number of trainees: [e.g., 5 new volunteers]
- Tools/tech to learn: [e.g., ProPresenter, Planning Center, check-in system, soundboard] Create a structured training plan:

1. Session Overview - 3-5 measurable learning objectives ('By the end, you'll be able to...')

- Materials and setup needed

2. Session Flow (timed segments)

- Welcome/icebreaker to build team connection - 5-min vision cast: why this role matters
- Core skills walkthrough with demonstration
- Hands-on practice (at least 40% of total time)
- Q&A and scenario walkthroughs
- Wrap-up with clear next steps
- 3. 'What Do I Do When...' Guide - 8-10 common scenarios with step-by-step responses (routine and edge cases)
- Who to escalate to and emergency procedures

4. Quick Reference Card

- One-page cheat sheet for phone or print: key contacts, common task steps, 'if in doubt' defaults
 - 5. 30-Day Follow-Up Plan
 - Check-in schedule, buddy/mentor pairing, and feedback loop
- Make training feel like equipping, not lecturing. Adults learn by doing, not sitting through two hours of talking.

TRY THIS NEXT

Reply: "Turn the What Do I Do When guide into a laminated half-page." The cheat sheet gets used long after the training is forgotten.

Create a Volunteer Schedule for the Month

WHEN TO USE

When you need to build a fair, balanced monthly volunteer schedule that avoids burning out your most faithful servants and accounts for everyone's availability.

THE PROMPT

Help me with this ministry task: Create a Volunteer Schedule for the Month.

Use the church profile and task details at the end. Work from the information I provide. If an essential detail is missing, ask up to three focused questions before drafting. Do not invent facts, quotations, statistics, stories, dates, policies, platform capabilities, or sources. Clearly label assumptions and anything that needs human verification.

[PASTE YOUR VOLUNTEER LIST HERE - include each person's name, role(s) they can fill, weekends they CAN'T serve, and preferences (e.g., prefers first service, can't serve back-to-back weeks)] Service details:

- Service times: [e.g., 9:00 AM and 11:00 AM]
- Positions needed per service: [e.g., 2 greeters, 1 sound tech, 3 children's workers, 1 camera operator]
- Month to schedule: [e.g., April 2026]
- Number of Sundays: [e.g., 4 or 5]
- Special events: [e.g., Easter needs double volunteers, fifth Sunday combined service] Create these deliverables:

1. Monthly Schedule Grid

- Organized by date > service time > position, showing volunteer names
- Flag understaffed slots with a warning

2. Burnout Prevention Check

- No one scheduled more than 2 Sundays/month (flag exceptions with reasoning)
- No one serves both services same Sunday unless requested
- Pair at least one experienced person with every newer volunteer

3. Individual Volunteer Summary

- Each volunteer's dates, role, and service time - formatted for copy-paste into a text or email

4. Swap and Sub Process

- Step-by-step swap instructions, template text message, and emergency backup contact

5. Gaps and Recommendations

- Flag chronically understaffed positions
- Recommend specific recruitment targets (e.g., 'Need 2 more sound techs for healthy rotation') Prioritize fairness and sustainability over perfect coverage. Better to flag a gap than overwork a willing volunteer.

TRY THIS NEXT

Send each volunteer their personal summary, not the whole grid. A schedule that greets you by name is a schedule you show up for.

Write a 'We Miss You' Message for Inactive Volunteers

WHEN TO USE

When a volunteer has quietly stepped away from serving and you want to reach out with warmth and zero guilt to check in and leave the door open for their return.

THE PROMPT

Help me with this ministry task: Write a 'We Miss You' Message for Inactive Volunteers.

Use the church profile and task details at the end. Work from the information I provide. If an essential detail is missing, ask up to three focused questions before drafting. Do not invent facts, quotations, statistics, stories, dates, policies, platform capabilities, or sources. Clearly label assumptions and anything that needs human verification.

Protect confidential and identifying information. Use only details that I am authorized to share, recommend redactions when appropriate, and require human approval before anything is sent or published.

I need a re-engagement message for an inactive volunteer:

- Volunteer's name: [First name]
 - Role they served in: [e.g., worship team vocalist, kids' check-in, small group leader]
 - How long absent: [e.g., 6 weeks, 3 months, since last summer]
 - Known context: [e.g., had a baby, divorce, gradually stopped, mentioned overwhelm - or 'I don't know']
 - Your relationship: [e.g., close, casual, distant - mainly knew them through their team lead]
 - Serving history: [e.g., faithful for 3 years, newer volunteer who served a few months] Write three versions: Version 1: Personal Text Message (60-90 words)
 - Open with genuine warmth referencing something specific about them, not their role
 - Acknowledge their absence without making it weird
 - Express care for them as a person first
 - Do NOT ask them to come back or serve
 - End with an open door - 'coffee sometime?' or 'just checking in'
 - Version 2: Re-Engagement with Low-Commitment Option (100-150 words)
 - Everything from Version 1, plus mention their team misses them socially (not functionally)
 - Offer a lower-commitment re-entry path (once a month, shadow someone, try a different role)
 - Make it crystal clear there's no obligation
 - Version 3: Door-Is-Always-Open (80-120 words)
 - For long-absent volunteers or where previous outreach got no response
 - Acknowledge the time passed without guilt
 - Affirm their value as a person, not just a volunteer
 - No ask, no follow-up pressure - just an open door
- Across all versions: zero guilt language, no assumptions about why they left, respect their autonomy, sound like a real human.

TRY THIS NEXT

Send Version 1 and actually mean the coffee. If your first message contains an ask, they'll know the church missed their function, not them.

Create a Meeting Agenda That Respects Everyone's Time

WHEN TO USE

Before any board meeting, staff meeting, or committee session to ensure the time is focused, productive, and ends on schedule.

THE PROMPT

Help me with this ministry task: Create a Meeting Agenda That Respects Everyone's Time.

Use the church profile and task details at the end. Work from the information I provide. If an essential detail is missing, ask up to three focused questions before drafting. Do not invent facts, quotations, statistics, stories, dates, policies, platform capabilities, or sources. Clearly label assumptions and anything that needs human verification.

I need a tightly structured meeting agenda that respects everyone's time and drives real decisions. Here are the meeting details:

- Meeting purpose: [DESCRIBE THE PRIMARY PURPOSE - e.g., monthly elder board meeting, staff planning session, deacon review]
- Attendees and roles: [LIST WHO WILL BE THERE AND THEIR ROLES - e.g., 6 elders, senior pastor, executive pastor]
- Total time available: [e.g., 90 minutes]
- Decisions that MUST be made: [LIST SPECIFIC DECISIONS - e.g., approve next quarter's budget, vote on new staff hire, finalize Easter service plan]
- Discussion topics (no decision needed): [LIST ANY ITEMS THAT NEED DISCUSSION BUT NOT A VOTE]
- Any updates or reports to share: [LIST BRIEF UPDATES - e.g., attendance trends, building project status] Create a complete meeting agenda with:

1. Pre-Meeting Prep

- List exactly what each attendee should read or review BEFORE the meeting (with time estimates for each item). Nothing should be read aloud in the meeting that could have been read in advance.

2. Timed Agenda

- Every section gets a specific time allocation (in minutes) that totals to the available time. For each section include:
- Start time
- Topic and owner (who leads this section)
- Objective (what "done" looks like for this section)
- Whether it is a DECISION item or DISCUSSION item (flag clearly)

3. Decision Framework

- For each decision item, include the specific motion language and what information the group needs to make the decision.

4. Parking Lot Section

- A designated space at the bottom for topics that come up but don't belong in this meeting, with a note on where each parked item will be addressed.

5. Next Steps Tracker

- A table at the end with columns: Action Item | Owner | Deadline | Follow-up Date. Keep the agenda to one page if possible. Use clear, scannable formatting. Front-load decision items when energy is highest. Put updates and FYI items last or in the pre-read.

TRY THIS NEXT

End the meeting by reading the action tracker out loud. Then reply: "Format the action items as a follow-up email to everyone who attended."

Plan a Church Event from Start to Finish

WHEN TO USE

When you're responsible for a church event and need a complete project plan so nothing falls through the cracks.

THE PROMPT

Help me with this ministry task: Plan a Church Event from Start to Finish.

Use the church profile and task details at the end. Work from the information I provide. If an essential detail is missing, ask up to three focused questions before drafting. Do not invent facts, quotations, statistics, stories, dates, policies, platform capabilities, or sources. Clearly label assumptions and anything that needs human verification.

I need a complete event plan that takes this from idea to successful execution to post-event follow-up. Here are the event details:

- Event type: [DESCRIBE THE EVENT - e.g., fall festival, VBS, Easter service, men's breakfast, community outreach block party]
- Date: [EVENT DATE]
- Expected attendance: [NUMBER]
- Budget: [TOTAL BUDGET AVAILABLE]
- Venue: [WHERE - e.g., church campus, rented facility, outdoor park]
- Key goals: [WHAT DOES SUCCESS LOOK LIKE - e.g., community outreach with 30% unchurched attendees, fellowship event for congregation, fundraiser hitting $X] Create a comprehensive event plan with these sections:

1. Event Overview

- One-paragraph summary including purpose, target audience, and success metrics.
- 2. 8-Week Countdown Timeline
- Week-by-week task list from 8 weeks out through event day. Each week should include specific tasks, who owns them, and deadlines. Include a detailed day-of timeline broken into hourly blocks.

3. Budget Breakdown

- Allocate the budget across categories (venue, food, supplies, promotion, decor, rentals, contingency). Include a 10% contingency buffer. Flag any areas where volunteer effort can replace spending.

4. Promotion Schedule

- When and where to promote: pulpit announcements, bulletin, social media posts, email blasts, signage, personal invitations. Include specific dates for each touchpoint.

5. Volunteer Needs

- Every role needed with number of people, time commitment, and skill level. Organize by team (setup, registration, food, activities, teardown, parking, childcare, prayer).

6. Supplies & Equipment Checklist

- Categorized list of everything needed, with quantities. Note what the church already likely owns vs. what needs purchasing or renting.

7. Risk & Contingency Plan

- Top 5 things that could go wrong and the backup plan for each (weather, low turnout, volunteer no-shows, equipment failure, over-attendance).

8. Post-Event Debrief Questions - 10 specific questions for the team debrief covering what worked, what didn't, budget accuracy, volunteer feedback, and improvements for next time. Make this practical for a church that runs on volunteers, not paid event staff.

TRY THIS NEXT

Move the 8-week timeline into Asana, Trello, or Planning Center with owners the same day. A plan living in a chat thread is not a plan.

PROMPT 59 - ADMINISTRATION & OPERATIONS

Write a Church Policy or Procedure Document

WHEN TO USE

When your church needs a formal written policy for legal protection, volunteer clarity, or organizational consistency - especially for child safety, facility use, finances, or HR.

THE PROMPT

Help me with this ministry task: Write a Church Policy or Procedure Document.

Use the church profile and task details at the end. Work from the information I provide. If an essential detail is missing, ask up to three focused questions before drafting. Do not invent facts, quotations, statistics, stories, dates, policies, platform capabilities, or sources. Clearly label assumptions and anything that needs human verification.

Treat this as a planning draft, not legal, clinical, safeguarding, or crisis advice. Flag urgent safety concerns and sections that require a qualified local professional or denominational review.

I need a clear, enforceable policy document written in plain language that any church member or volunteer can understand.

Here are the details:

- Policy topic: [SPECIFY - e.g., child protection, facility use, social media, financial handling, volunteer screening, benevolence fund, staff conduct, data privacy, wedding/funeral use]
- Church size and structure: [e.g., 200 members, elder-led with 3 paid staff]
- Specific concerns prompting this policy: [WHAT HAPPENED OR WHAT RISK ARE YOU TRYING TO ADDRESS]
- Any existing policies to build on: [DESCRIBE OR TYPE "starting from scratch"]
- State/region (for legal context): [YOUR STATE] Write a complete policy document with these sections:

1. Policy Title and Effective Date

- Clear, specific title. Space for approval date and revision number.

2. Purpose Statement - 2-3 sentences explaining WHY this policy exists, written in a tone that communicates care and stewardship rather than bureaucracy.

3. Scope

- Exactly who this policy applies to (staff, volunteers, members, visitors, outside groups) and when it applies.

4. Definitions

- Define any terms that could be interpreted differently by different people.

5. Policy Statements

- The actual rules and standards, written as clear numbered items. Each statement should be specific enough that two people would agree on whether it's being followed.

6. Procedures

- Step-by-step instructions for how to implement each policy statement. Include who does what and in what order.

7. Responsible Parties

- Name the specific roles (not people) responsible for enforcement, training, and compliance.

8. Exceptions and Appeals

- How someone requests an exception and who decides.

9. Violations and Consequences

- What happens when the policy is violated, with graduated responses where appropriate.

10. Review Schedule

- How often this policy is reviewed, by whom, and the process for amendments.

11. Acknowledgment Form

- A sign-off section for individuals to confirm they've read and understood the policy. Use plain language throughout - no legalese. But make it specific enough to hold up under scrutiny. Include a note recommending legal review before final adoption.

TRY THIS NEXT

AI drafts the policy. It doesn't carry the liability. Have a local attorney review anything touching child safety, money, or employment before adoption.

PROMPT 60 - ADMINISTRATION & OPERATIONS

Create a Weekly Operations Checklist

WHEN TO USE

Set this up once, then use it every week to make sure nothing slips through the cracks in your church's week-to-week operations.

THE PROMPT

Help me with this ministry task: Create a Weekly Operations Checklist.

Use the church profile and task details at the end. Work from the information I provide. If an essential detail is missing, ask up to three focused questions before drafting. Do not invent facts, quotations, statistics, stories, dates, policies, platform capabilities, or sources. Clearly label assumptions and anything that needs human verification.

I need a comprehensive day-by-day weekly operations checklist customized to my church's specific setup. Here are my church details:

- Church size: [AVERAGE WEEKLY ATTENDANCE]
- Paid staff and roles: [LIST EACH STAFF MEMBER AND THEIR ROLE - e.g., senior pastor, admin assistant, worship leader, youth director]
- Key volunteers and roles: [LIST REGULAR VOLUNTEER ROLES - e.g., AV team lead, facilities coordinator, children's ministry director]
- Service schedule: [DAYS AND TIMES OF ALL SERVICES - e.g., Sunday 9am and 11am, Wednesday 7pm]
- Regular weekly ministries: [LIST - e.g., small groups Tuesday, youth group Wednesday, choir practice Thursday]
- Office hours: [WHEN IS THE CHURCH OFFICE STAFFED] Create a day-by-day operations checklist (Monday through Sunday) that includes: For Each Day:
 - Specific tasks listed with the responsible role (not person name, so it survives staff changes)
 - Time-sensitive items flagged with deadlines
- A "verify" checkpoint for anything that was delegated earlier in the week Categories to Cover Each Week:

1. Facility Prep

- Building walkthrough, HVAC, room setups, signage, supply restocking, safety checks

2. Communication Deadlines

- Bulletin content due, email draft due, social media posts scheduled, announcement slide deadlines, website updates

3. Service Preparation

- Worship set finalized, sermon notes to AV, volunteer confirmations, communion prep, baptism prep, special elements

4. Follow-Up Tasks

- First-time visitor follow-up (within 48 hrs), prayer request follow-up, absentee check-ins, hospital/homebound visits

5. Administrative

- Offering count and deposit, financial entries, mail processing, supply orders, maintenance requests, staff meeting prep

6. Upcoming Week Preview

- Friday or Saturday review of next week's calendar for conflicts, gaps, or special needs Format this as a printable checklist with checkboxes. Group tasks by day and time of day (morning/afternoon). Include a "weekly reset" task on Monday to review the previous week's incomplete items.

TRY THIS NEXT

Reply: "Format this as a printable Monday-through-Sunday checklist with checkboxes." Laminate it and hang it where the coffee gets made.

PROMPT 61 - ADMINISTRATION & OPERATIONS

Draft a Facilities Use Request Form and Policy

WHEN TO USE

When outside groups or church ministries want to use your building and you need a clear, fair process that protects the church while being welcoming.

THE PROMPT

Help me with this ministry task: Draft a Facilities Use Request Form and Policy.

Use the church profile and task details at the end. Work from the information I provide. If an essential detail is missing, ask up to three focused questions before drafting. Do not invent facts, quotations, statistics, stories, dates, policies, platform capabilities, or sources. Clearly label assumptions and anything that needs human verification.

Treat this as a planning draft, not legal, clinical, safeguarding, or crisis advice. Flag urgent safety concerns and sections that require a qualified local professional or denominational review.

I need both a facilities use request form AND a usage policy document that work together. Here are my church's specifics:

- Types of groups requesting space: [LIST - e.g., church ministries, member events, community nonprofits, outside organizations, private parties like weddings/receptions]
- Liability concerns: [LIST ANY SPECIFIC CONCERNS - e.g., events with minors, food service, alcohol on campus, bounce houses, parking overflow]
- Church priorities for building use: [RANK - e.g., church ministries first, then members, then community groups, then outside organizations]
- Available spaces: [LIST ROOMS/AREAS - e.g., sanctuary (seats 300), fellowship hall (seats 150), 4 classrooms, kitchen, outdoor pavilion]
- Do you charge fees: [YES/NO, and if yes, general range or "help me figure this out"]

Part 1: Facilities Use Request Form Create a form template with these fields:

- Requester information (name, organization, contact, relationship to church)
- Event details (date, time, setup/teardown times, expected attendance, event description)
- Spaces requested (with room options)
- Equipment/resource needs (AV, kitchen, tables, chairs, etc.)
- Special requirements (parking, childcare, accessibility)
- Agreement checkboxes (liability, damage deposit, rules acknowledgment)
- Approval workflow (submitted to to reviewed by to approved by to with timeline)

Part 2: Facilities Use Policy Write a clear policy document covering:

1. Priority levels

- Who gets first access and how conflicts are resolved

2. Scheduling process

- How far in advance to request, blackout dates, recurring vs. one-time

3. Fee structure

- Suggested fee tiers by group type and space, including what's included

4. Insurance requirements

- When outside groups need their own liability coverage

5. Setup and teardown expectations

- Specific standards for how the space must be left, with a walkthrough checklist

6. Prohibited activities

- Clear list of what cannot happen on church property

7. Damage and deposit policy

- How deposits work, damage assessment process

8. Cancellation policy

- Timeline and any fees

9. Key/access procedures

- Who gets building access and how

10. Church liaison requirement

- When a church representative must be present Make this welcoming in tone but specific enough to prevent misunderstandings.

TRY THIS NEXT

Reply: "Turn the request form into a Google Form field list" and go digital on day one. Paper requests get lost. Submissions don't.

Generate a Year-End Report for Your Congregation

WHEN TO USE At the end of the year (or ministry season) when you need to celebrate wins, share key metrics, and cast vision for the year ahead in a way the whole congregation can appreciate.

THE PROMPT

Help me with this ministry task: Generate a Year-End Report for Your Congregation.

Use the church profile and task details at the end. Work from the information I provide. If an essential detail is missing, ask up to three focused questions before drafting. Do not invent facts, quotations, statistics, stories, dates, policies, platform capabilities, or sources. Clearly label assumptions and anything that needs human verification.

Do not rely on unverified performance claims, current platform features, rankings, prices, statistics, or recent events. Ask for a source or label the item for verification.

Protect confidential and identifying information. Use only details that I am authorized to share, recommend redactions when appropriate, and require human approval before anything is sent or published.

I need a year-end report that is visually describable (so a designer can lay it out), emotionally resonant, and data-driven. Here are my church's key stats for the year: [PASTE YOUR KEY STATS HERE - include as many as you have: average weekly attendance, total giving, missions giving, number of baptisms, new members, salvations, small group participation, volunteer count, community service hours, events held, ministries launched, building projects, benevolence distributed, online engagement metrics, any other numbers you're proud of] Additional context:

- Church name: [YOUR CHURCH NAME]
- Year being reported: [YEAR]
- Senior pastor name: [NAME]
- Theme or verse for the year (if any): [THEME] - 2-3 highlight stories from the year: [BRIEFLY DESCRIBE - e.g., a life transformation, a ministry milestone, a community impact moment]
- Top priorities for next year: [LIST 2-3 KEY GOALS OR VISION ITEMS] Create a 2-page year-end report with these sections:

1. Opening Letter (from the pastor) - 150-word personal reflection on the year. Grateful tone, specific references to what God did, honest about challenges, hopeful about the future. Written in first person as the pastor.

2. By the Numbers

- Select the 8-10 most impressive metrics and present them as large-format callout stats with brief context lines (e.g., "147 Baptisms - that's one every 2.5 days"). Prioritize year-over-year comparisons where they tell a positive story.

3. Impact Stories

- Framework for 2-3 short story spotlights (50 words each) with prompts for what to include: the person's situation before, what happened, and the transformation. Include placeholder guidance for photos.

4. Ministry Highlights

- Brief celebration of 4-6 key ministries with one standout stat or accomplishment each.

5. Financial Stewardship

- Transparent but positive summary of giving, spending categories, and how funds were used. Present as a simple visual breakdown (pie chart description).

6. Looking Ahead

- A forward-looking vision statement for the coming year. 100 words. Connect next year's goals to this year's momentum. End with a rallying sentence. Write everything in a warm, celebratory, faith-filled tone. Suggest layout notes (colors, pull quotes, photo placement) a designer could follow.

TRY THIS NEXT

Gather the numbers from your ChMS and giving platform first, then ask it to flag which year-over-year comparisons tell the best story. Lead with those.

PROMPT 63 - ADMINISTRATION & OPERATIONS

Create a Church Communication Calendar

WHEN TO USE

At the start of a new year or ministry season when you need to map out all church communications so nothing is last-minute and every channel is coordinated.

THE PROMPT

Help me with this ministry task: Create a Church Communication Calendar.

Use the church profile and task details at the end. Work from the information I provide. If an essential detail is missing, ask up to three focused questions before drafting. Do not invent facts, quotations, statistics, stories, dates, policies, platform capabilities, or sources. Clearly label assumptions and anything that needs human verification.

Do not rely on unverified performance claims, current platform features, rankings, prices, statistics, or recent events. Ask for a source or label the item for verification.

I need a 12-month communication calendar that coordinates all our channels and ensures consistent, strategic messaging. Here are my church's communication details:

- Recurring communications: [LIST ALL - e.g., weekly email newsletter (Tuesdays), monthly printed newsletter, Sunday bulletin, social media (Facebook/Instagram daily), website blog (2x month), text message alerts, lobby TV slides]
- Staff or volunteers responsible: [WHO HANDLES WHAT - e.g., admin does bulletin and email, pastor does blog, volunteer does social media]
- Key annual dates: [LIST - e.g., Easter, Christmas Eve, VBS (June), back-to-school, stewardship campaign (October), missions month (March), church anniversary]
- Sermon series schedule (if known): [LIST PLANNED SERIES AND DATES]
- Ministries that need regular promotion: [LIST - e.g., small groups, youth, children's, men's, women's, missions, outreach] Create a comprehensive 12-month communication calendar with:

1. Monthly Overview Grid

- For each month, show:
- Monthly theme (tied to sermon series or seasonal emphasis)
- Key dates and events to promote
- Which ministries get spotlight that month
- Any campaigns or pushes (e.g., volunteer drive, stewardship, outreach)

2. Weekly Cadence Template

- A repeatable weekly rhythm showing:
- Which day each communication goes out
- Content type for each channel on each day
- Deadlines for content submission (work backward from send dates)
- Who is responsible for each piece

3. Content Themes by Season:

- January-February: [New year, vision casting]
- March-April: [Lent, Easter, spring]
- May-June: [Graduations, summer kickoff, VBS]

- July-August: [Summer series, back-to-school]
- September-October: [Fall launch, stewardship, outreach]
- November-December: [Thanksgiving, Advent, Christmas, year-end giving]

4. Campaign Placeholders

- For each major push (Easter, Christmas, stewardship, VBS, etc.), outline a 4-week promotional ramp-up showing what goes out on which channel each week.

5. Ministry Rotation Schedule

- A fair rotation ensuring every ministry gets promoted across all channels at least once per quarter.

6. Content Bank Suggestions

- For each month, suggest 4 social media post ideas, 2 email topics, and 1 blog/article idea tied to the monthly theme. Format this so it can be transferred into a spreadsheet or project management tool. Include notes on when to schedule a quarterly review to adjust the calendar.

TRY THIS NEXT

Build it in a real spreadsheet the same day, then revisit quarterly with: "Rebalance next quarter based on what we actually shipped."

Plan a Community Outreach Event

WHEN TO USE

When you're planning a community-facing event and need a complete logistics plan, promotion strategy, and follow-up system - not just a vague idea but an executable playbook your team can run with.

THE PROMPT

Help me with this ministry task: Plan a Community Outreach Event.

Use the church profile and task details at the end. Work from the information I provide. If an essential detail is missing, ask up to three focused questions before drafting. Do not invent facts, quotations, statistics, stories, dates, policies, platform capabilities, or sources. Clearly label assumptions and anything that needs human verification.

I need a complete outreach event plan. Before building it, think through: What does this community actually need (not what we think they need)? How do we show up as neighbors first and a church second? What makes someone want to come back - not out of guilt, but because they felt genuinely cared for?

Here's my input:

- Target community need: [DESCRIBE THE NEED YOU'RE TRYING TO ADDRESS, e.g., "back-to-school supplies for low-income families," "loneliness among seniors," "job skills training"]
- Available resources: [WHAT DO YOU HAVE - facility space, kitchen, parking lot, AV equipment, etc.]
- Team size: [HOW MANY VOLUNTEERS CAN YOU REALISTICALLY MOBILIZE]
- Budget: [ENTER YOUR BUDGET RANGE]

Deliver the following:

1. Event Concept - a clear name, description, and value proposition that would make sense on a community bulletin board with zero church jargon. Include 2-3 name options.
2. Logistics Plan - date/time recommendations (with reasoning), venue setup, materials/supplies list with estimated costs, food considerations, parking and signage, and accessibility notes.
3. Promotion Strategy - a multi-channel plan that reaches people OUTSIDE your church walls. Include: community Facebook groups, local newspaper/radio, school flyer partnerships, neighborhood apps (Nextdoor), door-to-door flyers, and partnerships with local businesses. For each channel, provide sample copy.
4. Volunteer Roles & Briefing - specific roles needed (greeter, setup, activity lead, conversation partner, follow-up coordinator), how many per role, and a short briefing script that trains volunteers to be warm and present - not pushy. Include explicit instructions: no cornering people with salvation pitches, no bait-and-switch moments.
5. Conversation Guide - 5-7 natural conversation starters volunteers can use that build genuine connection. Questions that show real curiosity about the person, not setups for a gospel presentation.
6. Follow-Up Plan - a 3-touch follow-up sequence (within 48 hours, 1 week, 1 month) that offers continued value without pressure. Include what NOT to do (don't add them to your email blast, don't invite them to a membership class on first contact).
7. Success Metrics - how to measure whether this event actually built community trust, beyond just counting heads. Include qualitative and quantitative measures.

TRY THIS NEXT

Before you commit, ask: "Give me five ways to find out what our neighborhood actually needs first." Serve the real need, not the assumed one.

Write an Invitation That Non-Church People Would Actually Open

WHEN TO USE

When you need invite copy for an event or service and want language that resonates with people who don't go to church - not the copy that only makes sense to people already in your pews.

THE PROMPT

Help me with this ministry task: Write an Invitation That Non-Church People Would Actually Open.

Use the church profile and task details at the end. Work from the information I provide. If an essential detail is missing, ask up to three focused questions before drafting. Do not invent facts, quotations, statistics, stories, dates, policies, platform capabilities, or sources. Clearly label assumptions and anything that needs human verification.

I need invitation copy for multiple formats, all written for people who do NOT attend church. Before writing, think through: If I received this and hadn't been to church in 10 years (or ever), would I feel welcomed or targeted? Would I understand what I'm walking into? Would I feel safe bringing my kids?

Here's my input:

- What you're inviting people to: [DESCRIBE THE EVENT OR SERVICE - e.g., "Easter Sunday services," "free community dinner," "parenting workshop series"]
- Key details: [DATE, TIME, LOCATION, any important logistics like childcare, parking, food]
- Target audience: [WHO ARE YOU TRYING TO REACH - e.g., "neighbors within 2 miles," "school families at the elementary school next door," "young professionals in downtown apartments"]
- Your church's personality: [DESCRIBE YOUR VIBE - e.g., "casual and come-as-you-are," "traditional but warm," "young and energetic"] Deliver the following - each must be written fresh (not just shorter versions of the same copy):

1. Direct Mail Postcard (front and back) - 50-75 words front, 30-50 words back. Lead with the benefit to THEM, not what your church is doing. Include a clear what/when/where. Design direction notes included.
2. Social Media Ad Copy (3 variations) - each under 125 words with a headline, primary text, and CTA. One curiosity-driven, one benefit-driven, one social-proof-driven. Written for someone scrolling who has no context about your church.
3. Door Hanger Copy - 40-60 words. Friendly, neighborly tone. Must work without any visual context. Include a specific, low-pressure call to action.
4. Personal Text Message (2 versions) - under 160 characters each. One for a member to send to a friend, one for a member to send to a neighbor they don't know well. Natural, not scripted-sounding.

Constraints: Zero church jargon. No words like: fellowship, anointed, worship experience, season, blessed, ministry, sanctuary, saved. Write like a friendly neighbor, not a church bulletin. Every piece must answer the reader's unspoken question: "What's in it for me and will I feel awkward?"

TRY THIS NEXT

Show it to a friend who doesn't do church and ask one question: "Would you open this?" If they hesitate, paste their reaction back in and rewrite.

Create a Community Partnership Proposal

WHEN TO USE

When you want to partner with a local school, nonprofit, or business and need a professional proposal that shows shared value - not a one-sided ask for them to promote your church.

THE PROMPT

Help me with this ministry task: Create a Community Partnership Proposal.

Use the church profile and task details at the end. Work from the information I provide. If an essential detail is missing, ask up to three focused questions before drafting. Do not invent facts, quotations, statistics, stories, dates, policies, platform capabilities, or sources. Clearly label assumptions and anything that needs human verification.

I need a professional one-page partnership proposal. Before drafting, think through: What does the partner organization actually need? What's their hesitation about working with a church? How do we make this feel like a peer-to-peer collaboration, not a church trying to access their audience?

Here's my input:

- Potential partner: [NAME AND TYPE OF ORGANIZATION - e.g., "Lincoln Elementary School," "Habitat for Humanity local chapter," "downtown coffee shop"]
- Proposed collaboration: [WHAT YOU WANT TO DO TOGETHER - e.g., "after-school tutoring program," "monthly community meal," "job fair for unemployed residents"]
- What your church brings to the table: [YOUR ASSETS - volunteers, facility, funding, expertise, existing programs]
- Your church's community track record (if any): [PAST COMMUNITY PROJECTS OR PARTNERSHIPS]

Deliver the following:

1. Partnership Proposal (One Page) - formatted professionally with these sections:

- Shared Mission Statement - 2-3 sentences framing the collaboration around the community need you both care about. No religious language.
- Proposed Activities - specific, concrete actions with timeline. What happens in month 1, month 3, month 6.
- Resource Commitments - a clear table showing what each party contributes (volunteers, space, funding, materials, expertise). Be specific with numbers.
- Success Metrics - 3-5 measurable outcomes you'll track together. Include both output metrics (people served) and outcome metrics (lives changed).
- Communication Plan - how you'll coordinate, how often you'll meet, who the point person is on each side.
- Boundaries & Expectations - a brief, honest section addressing the elephant in the room: this is not a recruitment effort. Your church will not distribute religious materials, require attendance, or use the partnership to proselytize. State this clearly.

2. Cover Email - a warm, concise email (150 words max) to send with the proposal. Tone: professional peer, not charity case or religious authority.

3. Talking Points - 5 bullet points for the in-person meeting, including how to handle the question: "So what does your church get out of this?"

TRY THIS NEXT

Paste the partner's mission statement from their website into the prompt. A proposal written in their language gets a meeting. One written in yours gets a polite no.

Develop a Neighborhood Engagement Strategy

WHEN TO USE

When your church wants to be known in the neighborhood for more than Sunday noise - and you need a practical 90-day plan to become genuine neighbors, not just the building people drive past.

THE PROMPT

Help me with this ministry task: Develop a Neighborhood Engagement Strategy.

Use the church profile and task details at the end. Work from the information I provide. If an essential detail is missing, ask up to three focused questions before drafting. Do not invent facts, quotations, statistics, stories, dates, policies, platform capabilities, or sources. Clearly label assumptions and anything that needs human verification.

I need a 90-day neighborhood engagement plan. Before building it, think through: What does this neighborhood actually look like on a Tuesday afternoon? Who are the informal community leaders (the crossing guard everyone knows, the barbershop owner, the school secretary)? What needs are hiding in plain sight?

Here's my input:

- Church location: [DESCRIBE YOUR SETTING - urban, suburban, rural, and any relevant details about the immediate area]
- Surrounding demographics (if known): [AGE RANGES, INCOME LEVELS, ETHNIC MAKEUP, FAMILY STRUCTURES - or "I don't know much, help me figure this out"]
- Current community involvement: [WHAT YOUR CHURCH CURRENTLY DOES OUTSIDE ITS WALLS, even if the answer is "very little"]
- Team available for neighborhood engagement: [HOW MANY PEOPLE, HOW MANY HOURS PER WEEK] Deliver a 90-day plan organized into three phases: Phase 1: Listen & Learn (Weeks 1-4)
 - Weekly activities that cost nothing but build awareness: prayer walks with specific routes, community mapping exercise, attending existing neighborhood meetings/events, identifying 10 key community connectors
 - A simple "neighborhood audit" template - what businesses, services, gathering places, and gaps exist within a 1-mile radius
 - Conversation guide for learning (not teaching) - questions to ask neighbors that show genuine curiosity
- Phase 2: Show Up & Serve (Weeks 5-8) - 4 low-commitment, high-visibility serving opportunities based on common neighborhood needs (e.g., community fridge, lawn care for elderly, school supply collection, free car wash)
 - For each opportunity: logistics, volunteer needs, cost estimate, and how to do it without plastering your church logo everywhere
 - Strategy for engaging neighborhood social media (Nextdoor, local Facebook groups) as a helpful neighbor, not a promoter
- Phase 3: Invite & Deepen (Weeks 9-12) - 2 higher-commitment engagement opportunities (block party, service project, community dinner) with full planning guides
 - A rhythm for ongoing presence - what does month 4, 5, 6 look like so this doesn't die after the initial push?
 - How to transition from "that church that helped" to "our neighbors at [church name]" For each activity across all phases, include: effort level (1-5), cost estimate, number of volunteers needed, and the relationship-building opportunity it creates. End with a section on what NOT to do - common mistakes churches make when trying to engage their neighborhood.

TRY THIS NEXT

Finish Phase 1 before you schedule anything from Phase 2. Churches that skip the listening month wonder why nobody came to the block party.

Write Social Media Ads Targeting Your Community

WHEN TO USE When you're running Facebook or Instagram ads to promote something at your church and want copy that actually converts in your local community - not generic church marketing fluff.

THE PROMPT

Help me with this ministry task: Write Social Media Ads Targeting Your Community.

Use the church profile and task details at the end. Work from the information I provide. If an essential detail is missing, ask up to three focused questions before drafting. Do not invent facts, quotations, statistics, stories, dates, policies, platform capabilities, or sources. Clearly label assumptions and anything that needs human verification.

Do not rely on unverified performance claims, current platform features, rankings, prices, statistics, or recent events. Ask for a source or label the item for verification.

I need 3 high-performing ad variations plus targeting and budget guidance. Before writing, think through: What would make someone who's never visited this church stop scrolling? What felt need does this event/service/series address? What's the lowest-friction next step we can offer?

Here's my input:

- Church name and location: [CHURCH NAME, CITY, STATE]
- What you're promoting: [e.g., "Easter services," "new sermon series on anxiety," "free community BBQ," "grand opening of new campus"]
- Target radius: [e.g., "5 miles around the church," "our city of 50,000"]
- Church website or landing page URL: [URL WHERE YOU'LL SEND TRAFFIC]
- Anything unique about your church: [WHAT MAKES YOU DIFFERENT - casual dress, great kids program, diverse congregation, etc.]

Deliver the following:

1. Ad Variation 1: Curiosity Hook - a headline and primary text that creates an open loop or asks a provocative question. Designed to stop the scroll through intrigue.
 - Headline (40 characters max)
 - Primary text (125 words max - front-load the hook in the first line since that's all people see before "See More")
 - CTA button recommendation
 - Suggested image/video direction
2. Ad Variation 2: Benefit-Driven - leads with what the person GETS (community, answers, a fun family morning, free food, a fresh start), not what the church is doing.
 - Same format as above
3. Ad Variation 3: Social Proof / Story - uses a testimonial framework, community voice, or relatable scenario to build trust.
 - Same format as above
4. Audience Targeting Recommendations:
 - Primary audience: demographics, interests, and behaviors to target
 - Secondary audience: a lookalike or broader targeting option
 - Exclusions: who to exclude to avoid wasting spend
 - Placement recommendations (Feed vs. Stories vs. Reels)
5. Budget & Timeline:
 - Recommended daily budget based on your target radius
 - How many days before the event to start running

- When to kill underperforming ads
- Expected reach and cost-per-click benchmarks for church ads

Constraints: No fear-based messaging. No guilt trips. No insider language. Every ad must make sense to someone who has never set foot in a church. The tone should feel like an invitation from a friend, not a sales pitch from an institution.

TRY THIS NEXT

Never send ad traffic to your homepage. Reply: "Write the landing page headline and three bullets to match Ad Variation 2." The page has to finish what the ad starts.

PROMPT 69 - OUTREACH & EVANGELISM

Create an Easter/Christmas Invite Campaign

WHEN TO USE 6-8 weeks before Easter or Christmas when you need a complete multi-channel campaign to maximize attendance - covering social, email, print, and in-lobby promotion in one cohesive plan.

THE PROMPT

Help me with this ministry task: Create an Easter/Christmas Invite Campaign.

Use the church profile and task details at the end. Work from the information I provide. If an essential detail is missing, ask up to three focused questions before drafting. Do not invent facts, quotations, statistics, stories, dates, policies, platform capabilities, or sources. Clearly label assumptions and anything that needs human verification.

Do not rely on unverified performance claims, current platform features, rankings, prices, statistics, or recent events. Ask for a source or label the item for verification.

I need a complete 4-week campaign plan. Before building it, think through: What makes THIS Easter/Christmas worth attending for someone who could sleep in or visit family instead? What objections do non-attenders have (awkward, long, boring, judgmental) and how do we address them? How do we make it stupidly easy for members to invite?

Here's my input:

- Which holiday: [EASTER or CHRISTMAS]
- Service times: [LIST ALL SERVICE TIMES AND DATES]
- Special elements: [WHAT MAKES YOUR SERVICES SPECIAL - live music, kids program, candlelight, breakfast, egg hunt, etc.]
- Church personality: [DESCRIBE YOUR VIBE AND WHAT A FIRST-TIME VISITOR WOULD EXPERIENCE]
- Budget for the campaign: [OPTIONAL - helps with ad spend recommendations]

Deliver the following:

1. Campaign Theme & Tagline - 3 options for an overarching campaign theme with a tagline that works across all materials. Must resonate with non-church people. No cliches ("He is Risen" is fine for your existing congregation, but it means nothing on a billboard to someone who doesn't attend).
 2. 4-Week Timeline:
 - Week 1 (Seed): Build awareness - what goes out on social, email, and in the lobby
 - Week 2 (Grow): Increase urgency - ramp up messaging, launch ads, equip members
 - Week 3 (Push): Peak promotion - member challenge, community saturation, personal invites
 - Week 4 (Welcome): Final countdown - last-minute invites, logistics communication, welcome prep
- For each week, specify: what content goes live, on which channels, and who's responsible.

3. Social Media Content (8 posts total, 2 per week):

- Each post: caption text, visual direction, and posting time recommendation
- Mix of: countdown, behind-the-scenes, member story, direct invite, kid-focused, service-time graphic

4. Email to Members (2 emails):

- Email 1 (Week 2): "Here's why inviting matters and here's how to do it" - make it personal, not guilt-driven. Include pre-written text messages and social shares they can copy-paste.
- Email 2 (Week 3): "This is the week" - final push with a personal story and a specific ask (invite 3 people by name).

5. Direct Mail / Door Hanger Copy - front and back, designed for people with zero church context. Lead with experience, not theology.

6. Social Media Ad Copy (2 variations) - ready to run on Facebook/Instagram with targeting suggestions and budget recommendation.

7. Lobby & Signage Text - copy for lobby banner, bulletin insert, and bathroom mirror cling (yes, those work). Keep each piece under 30 words.

8. First-Time Visitor Experience Notes - a brief checklist of what to have ready on the day so first-timers feel expected and welcomed, not lost and awkward.

TRY THIS NEXT

If you only ship one piece of this campaign, ship the Week 2 member email with copy-paste invite texts. Your congregation is the distribution channel.

PROMPT 70 - OUTREACH & EVANGELISM

Build a "Serve Your City" Project Plan

WHEN TO USE

When your church wants to organize a community service project and needs a complete plan - from logistics to volunteer messaging to the hardest part: turning a one-day event into an ongoing relationship with your community.

THE PROMPT

Help me with this ministry task: Build a "Serve Your City" Project Plan.

Use the church profile and task details at the end. Work from the information I provide. If an essential detail is missing, ask up to three focused questions before drafting. Do not invent facts, quotations, statistics, stories, dates, policies, platform capabilities, or sources. Clearly label assumptions and anything that needs human verification.

I need a complete project plan that goes beyond logistics to build lasting community impact. Before planning, think through: Will this project address a real need the community has identified, or a need the church assumed? Are we serving WITH our neighbors or performing FOR them? What happens on Day 2?

Here's my input:

- Community need identified: [DESCRIBE WHAT YOU WANT TO ADDRESS - e.g., "park cleanup in underserved neighborhood," "meal prep for food-insecure families," "home repairs for elderly homeowners," "school beautification project"]
- Team capacity: [NUMBER OF VOLUNTEERS AND THEIR SKILL LEVELS]
- Budget: [AVAILABLE BUDGET]
- Preferred date/timeframe: [WHEN YOU'RE TARGETING]

Deliver the following:

1. Project Overview - clear project name (skip the churchy names - call it what it is), scope, location, and a one-paragraph description you could share with a city council member or local news outlet without any religious framing.
2. Pre-Project Planning (2-4 weeks before):
 - Community consultation steps - how to confirm this is actually needed and welcomed (not assumed)
 - Permits, permissions, and liability considerations
 - Materials and supply list with estimated costs and sourcing suggestions
 - Partnership opportunities (other churches, civic groups, local businesses that might contribute)
3. Volunteer Recruitment & Messaging:
 - Sign-up announcement copy (for Sunday morning, email, and social media)
 - The messaging should inspire action through purpose, not guilt. Focus on impact and community, not obligation.
 - Role descriptions so people know what they're signing up for
 - Age-appropriate roles for families with kids
4. Day-Of Run Sheet:
 - Hour-by-hour schedule from setup to breakdown
 - Team leader assignments and responsibilities
 - Safety briefing outline
 - Supplies and logistics checklist (what goes where, who brings what)
 - Photo/video documentation plan (with consent considerations)
 - How to interact with community members who show up to watch or participate - warmth without weirdness
5. The Day-After Plan (This Is the Part Most Churches Skip): - 48-hour follow-up with the community served - how to check in without being intrusive
 - How to share the story publicly in a way that honors the community (not "look what we did for those poor people")
 - A plan for returning - what's the next touchpoint in 2 weeks, 1 month, 3 months?
 - How to transition from "serve project" to "ongoing partnership" - specific steps to move from a one-day event to a sustained commitment
 - How to gather feedback from community members (not just your volunteers) to improve next time
6. What NOT To Do - 5 common mistakes churches make on serve days that damage trust instead of building it (e.g., matching t-shirts with your church logo plastered everywhere, taking photos of vulnerable people for your Instagram, leaving before the job is done).

TRY THIS NEXT

Calendar the Day 2 follow-up before you promote the event. If there's no return date on the books, it's a photo op, not a partnership.

Write a Giving Campaign Launch Letter

WHEN TO USE

When you're kicking off a new giving campaign - building fund, missions trip, facility upgrade, outreach initiative - and need a compelling launch letter that casts vision and makes the ask without guilt or manipulation.

THE PROMPT

Help me with this ministry task: Write a Giving Campaign Launch Letter.

Use the church profile and task details at the end. Work from the information I provide. If an essential detail is missing, ask up to three focused questions before drafting. Do not invent facts, quotations, statistics, stories, dates, policies, platform capabilities, or sources. Clearly label assumptions and anything that needs human verification.

Use transparent, non-coercive language. Do not manufacture urgency, impact stories, financial claims, or tax guidance.

I need a campaign launch letter that will be sent as both an email and a printed letter. Here's my campaign information:

- Campaign name: [ENTER YOUR CAMPAIGN NAME]
- Goal amount: [ENTER TOTAL GOAL, e.g., '$150,000']
- What it funds: [DESCRIBE SPECIFICALLY WHAT THE MONEY WILL DO - be concrete]
- Timeline: [ENTER CAMPAIGN DURATION, e.g., '6 weeks starting March 1']
- Key story of past giving impact: [BRIEFLY DESCRIBE ONE TIME YOUR CHURCH'S GENEROSITY MADE A TANGIBLE DIFFERENCE - this builds credibility]
- Church name and pastor name: [ENTER BOTH]
- Denomination/tradition (optional): [ENTER OR LEAVE BLANK]

Deliver the following:

1. Email Version (400-500 words):

- Subject line (3 options - curiosity-driven, not clickbait)
- Opening that leads with vision and impact, NOT the financial need
- A brief, specific callback to how past generosity made a real difference
- Clear explanation of what this campaign funds - broken into tangible units (e.g., '$50 provides X, $200 provides Y')
- The ask - specific, confident, and joyful. Include multiple giving tiers without making smaller amounts feel inadequate
- A clear call to action with a sense of timeline (not false urgency)
- Closing that focuses on what the church will accomplish together

2. Print Letter Version - same content adapted for a physical letter. Slightly more formal tone, includes a P.S. line (the most-read part of any letter), and formatting notes for the printer.

3. Campaign Tagline - 3 options for a short phrase that captures the campaign's vision (for banners, slides, social headers).

Constraints: No guilt language ('you should,' 'God expects,' 'don't miss out'). No comparison to what others are giving. No implication that giving amount reflects spiritual maturity. The tone should be confident, pastoral, and vision-forward.

TRY THIS NEXT

Before launch, reply: "What objections would a cautious giver raise about this letter?" Answer them in the FAQ before they get asked in the lobby.

Create a Stewardship Sermon Series Plan

WHEN TO USE

When it's time for your annual stewardship emphasis and you need a sermon series framework that teaches biblical generosity without making your congregation dread 'money month.'

THE PROMPT

Help me with this ministry task: Create a Stewardship Sermon Series Plan.

Use the church profile and task details at the end. Work from the information I provide. If an essential detail is missing, ask up to three focused questions before drafting. Do not invent facts, quotations, statistics, stories, dates, policies, platform capabilities, or sources. Clearly label assumptions and anything that needs human verification.

Respect my stated theological tradition. Distinguish the biblical text from interpretation and application, and name meaningful differences between traditions when relevant.

Use transparent, non-coercive language. Do not manufacture urgency, impact stories, financial claims, or tax guidance.

I need a stewardship sermon series plan. Here's my context:

- Number of weeks: [ENTER NUMBER, e.g., 3, 4, or 6]
- Church's current giving culture: [DESCRIBE HONESTLY - e.g., 'healthy and generous,' 'people get nervous when we talk about money,' 'we've never done a giving series,' 'recovering from a financial scandal']
- Specific giving challenges: [e.g., 'low recurring giving,' 'heavy reliance on a few large donors,' 'congregation skews young with student debt,' 'post-COVID giving hasn't recovered']
- Denomination/tradition: [ENTER OR LEAVE BLANK FOR BROADLY PROTESTANT]
- Church size and demographics: [BRIEF DESCRIPTION]

Deliver the following:

1. Series Title - 3 options that sound inviting, not guilt-inducing. These should make someone curious, not defensive. Rank by strength.
2. Series One-Liner - a lobby-poster sentence that reframes stewardship as something people want to engage with.
3. Weekly Breakdown - for each week provide:
 - Week number and sermon title
 - Primary scripture passage (with brief note on why this text)
 - Theme for the week (one sentence)
 - The theological move this week makes (what belief or mindset shifts)
 - Key tension to address (the objection or discomfort people carry about this topic)
 - Closing application - a specific, non-financial action for weeks 1-2 to build trust before any giving ask
4. Series Arc Notes - how the series progresses from theology to heart posture to practical application. Explain why this order matters for trust-building.
5. What NOT to Say - 3-5 specific phrases or approaches to avoid in this series, with brief explanations of why they backfire.
6. Complementary Elements - suggestions for testimonies, video pieces, or print materials that reinforce each week without making the series feel like a prolonged fundraiser. The series should work for someone who tithes faithfully AND someone who has never given a dollar to any church. Both should leave feeling encouraged, not judged.

TRY THIS NEXT

Go first. Reply: "Give me five questions to help me tell my own giving story in week two." Congregations trust pastors who preach what they practice.

PROMPT 73 - FUNDRAISING & GENEROSITY

Write Year-End Giving Appeal

WHEN TO USE

In late November or December when you need to communicate about year-end giving - leveraging the natural tax-deadline urgency and year-in-review momentum without sounding desperate or transactional.

THE PROMPT

Help me with this ministry task: Write Year-End Giving Appeal.

Use the church profile and task details at the end. Work from the information I provide. If an essential detail is missing, ask up to three focused questions before drafting. Do not invent facts, quotations, statistics, stories, dates, policies, platform capabilities, or sources. Clearly label assumptions and anything that needs human verification.

Do not rely on unverified performance claims, current platform features, rankings, prices, statistics, or recent events. Ask for a source or label the item for verification.

Use transparent, non-coercive language. Do not manufacture urgency, impact stories, financial claims, or tax guidance.

I need a complete year-end giving package.

Here's my input:

- Church name: [ENTER CHURCH NAME]
- Pastor name: [ENTER NAME]
- Year highlights (3-5 bullet points): [ENTER KEY WINS - baptisms, outreach events, lives changed, programs launched, milestones hit]
- Remaining budget gap (if any): [ENTER AMOUNT OR 'we're on track - this is about vision for next year']
- Key impact story: [DESCRIBE ONE SPECIFIC STORY OF HOW GIVING CHANGED A LIFE OR FUNDED SOMETHING MEANINGFUL THIS YEAR - be concrete]
- Online giving URL: [ENTER YOUR GIVING PAGE LINK]
- Next year's vision (1-2 sentences): [WHAT IS THE CHURCH REACHING TOWARD IN THE NEW YEAR?]

Deliver the following:

1. Year-End Letter/Email (450-550 words):

- Opens with gratitude and a highlight, NOT a financial need
- Tells the impact story in a way that connects giving to a real human outcome
- Includes a brief, honest financial update - transparent without being anxious
- Mentions the December 31 tax-deductible deadline naturally, not as the primary motivator
- Casts vision for next year to show the giving journey continues
- Closes with a warm, specific ask and a clear link to give online
- Subject line options (3) for email delivery

2. Social Media Post (2 versions):

- Version A: Story-driven (leads with the impact story, ends with giving link)
- Version B: Gratitude-driven (leads with thanking givers, then looks ahead) Both under 200 words. No hashtags.

3. Sunday Morning Announcement Script (60-90 seconds) - for a pastor or emcee to read during the last two Sundays of December. Warm, brief, vision-focused.

4. Text/SMS Message (under 160 characters) - a simple, personal-feeling nudge for December 30-31.

Constraints: No desperation language. No 'we won't make it without you' framing. No guilt. If there's a budget gap, frame it as an opportunity, not a crisis. The tone should feel like a celebration with an invitation to participate.

TRY THIS NEXT

Schedule the letter for December 26-30, not mid-December. Year-end gifts happen in the final week. The text message goes out on the 30th.

PROMPT 74 - FUNDRAISING & GENEROSITY

Draft a Capital Campaign Communication Plan

WHEN TO USE

When your church is launching a major capital campaign - building project, renovation, land purchase, debt retirement - and you need a full communication plan that sustains momentum over months without donor fatigue.

THE PROMPT

Help me with this ministry task: Draft a Capital Campaign Communication Plan.

Use the church profile and task details at the end. Work from the information I provide. If an essential detail is missing, ask up to three focused questions before drafting. Do not invent facts, quotations, statistics, stories, dates, policies, platform capabilities, or sources. Clearly label assumptions and anything that needs human verification.

Use transparent, non-coercive language. Do not manufacture urgency, impact stories, financial claims, or tax guidance.

I need a complete capital campaign communication plan. Here's my campaign:

- Project description: [DESCRIBE THE PROJECT - what you're building, renovating, or purchasing and WHY]
- Total goal: [ENTER AMOUNT]
- Campaign timeline: [ENTER DURATION, e.g., '3-year pledge period' or '18-month campaign']
- Campaign phases: [DESCRIBE YOUR PHASES, e.g., 'Phase 1: Leadership giving, Phase 2: Congregation- wide, Phase 3: Community']
- Church name: [ENTER NAME]
- Congregation size: [APPROXIMATE ATTENDANCE]
- Campaign name/theme (if you have one): [ENTER OR 'help me create one']

Deliver the following:

1. Campaign Name and Visual Theme (if not provided) - 3 options with a brief rationale for each. Should work on banners, mailers, and screens.
2. Launch Announcement (500-600 words) - the initial letter/email that introduces the campaign. Leads with the why, paints the picture of the future, makes the scope feel achievable, and ends with an invitation to an information event (not an immediate ask for money).
3. Monthly Update Template - a reusable template with fill-in sections for:
 - Progress thermometer language (how to talk about where you are without obsessing over the number)
 - Story of the month (how to feature a testimony or progress photo)
 - Next milestone to celebrate

- Giving reminder that feels natural, not forced Keep updates under 300 words. People should want to open these.

4. Milestone Celebration Copy (3 versions): - 25% of goal reached - 50% of goal reached

- Final goal reached Each is a short announcement (150-200 words) suitable for email, social, and Sunday morning. Celebratory, grateful, forward-looking.

5. Pledge Reminder Sequence - 3-touch sequence for pledge fulfillment reminders:

- Gentle first reminder (friendly, assumes good intent)

- Second reminder (warm, includes easy link to give or adjust pledge)

- Final reminder (gracious, offers option to adjust pledge amount with zero judgment) Each under 150 words. None should feel like a collections notice.

6. FAQ Document - 10 anticipated questions and answers covering: why now, why this amount, what if we don't reach the goal, can I designate my gift, what about the regular budget, how are decisions being made, etc.

Constraints: No 'we can't do this without you' desperation. No comparing pledge amounts. No implying that those who don't pledge aren't committed. The entire plan should feel like an invitation to participate in something exciting, not a financial obligation.

TRY THIS NEXT

Reply: "Build a 12-month communication calendar from this plan with dates and owners." Campaigns don't die from asking too much. They die from going silent.

PROMPT 75 - FUNDRAISING & GENEROSITY

Create a "Generosity Story" for Sunday Morning

WHEN TO USE

When you have a rough story about how someone's giving made a tangible impact and you need it shaped into a polished 90-second spoken piece for Sunday morning - powerful enough to inspire but careful enough to avoid 'give more' pressure.

THE PROMPT

Help me with this ministry task: Create a "Generosity Story" for Sunday Morning.

Use the church profile and task details at the end. Work from the information I provide. If an essential detail is missing, ask up to three focused questions before drafting. Do not invent facts, quotations, statistics, stories, dates, policies, platform capabilities, or sources. Clearly label assumptions and anything that needs human verification.

Protect confidential and identifying information. Use only details that I am authorized to share, recommend redactions when appropriate, and require human approval before anything is sent or published.

Use transparent, non-coercive language. Do not manufacture urgency, impact stories, financial claims, or tax guidance.

I'm going to give you my rough notes about how giving made a specific impact at our church. Turn these notes into a polished, ready-to-read spoken script for Sunday morning. [PASTE YOUR ROUGH NOTES HERE - include the who, what happened, and how giving made it possible. Messy is fine.] Additional context:

- Who will read this on Sunday? [e.g., 'the pastor,' 'a volunteer,' 'the person in the story themselves']

- Church name: [ENTER NAME]

- Any details to anonymize or protect? [NOTE ANYTHING SENSITIVE]

Deliver the following:

1. The Script (90 seconds when read aloud - approximately 200-225 words):
 - Opens with a specific, visual moment (not 'I want to tell you a story about...')
 - Centers one person and one clear before/after transformation
 - Connects the transformation to the generosity of the church without naming dollar amounts
 - Closes with a single line that lands emotionally - no call to action, no 'so please give,' just the truth of what happened
 - Includes parenthetical delivery notes: (pause), (slow down), (look up from notes)
 2. Transition Line for the Pastor - one sentence the pastor can use to transition from this story into the next element of the service (offering, song, sermon). Should feel natural, not 'and that's why you should give.'
 3. Abbreviated Version (45 seconds / ~110 words) - for weeks when the service is running long. Same story, tighter.
 4. Print Version (75 words) - for a bulletin insert, giving statement stuffer, or social media post. Written to be read, not spoken.
- Constraints: No dollar amounts unless the notes specifically call for it. No guilt. No 'if you had given more' framing. No prosperity theology. The story should make someone feel proud to be part of this church - whether they give $10 or $10,000 or nothing at all.

TRY THIS NEXT

Rehearse with a timer. If it runs past 90 seconds live, use the 45-second cut. A tight story that lands beats a full story that wanders.

PROMPT 76 - FUNDRAISING & GENEROSITY

Write a First-Time Giver Thank-You Sequence

WHEN TO USE A one-time setup to create the automated emails that fire when someone gives to your church for the first time. The goal: turn a one-time gift into a lasting habit by making givers feel valued, not processed.

THE PROMPT

Help me with this ministry task: Write a First-Time Giver Thank-You Sequence.

Use the church profile and task details at the end. Work from the information I provide. If an essential detail is missing, ask up to three focused questions before drafting. Do not invent facts, quotations, statistics, stories, dates, policies, platform capabilities, or sources. Clearly label assumptions and anything that needs human verification.

Protect confidential and identifying information. Use only details that I am authorized to share, recommend redactions when appropriate, and require human approval before anything is sent or published.

Use transparent, non-coercive language. Do not manufacture urgency, impact stories, financial claims, or tax guidance.

I need a 3-touch first-time giver follow-up sequence. Here's my info:

- Church name: [ENTER CHURCH NAME]
- Pastor's name (who the emails come from): [ENTER NAME]
- Giving platform: [e.g., 'Tithe.ly,' 'Planning Center Giving,' 'Pushpay,' 'Church Center']
- Next steps for new givers you'd like to mention: [e.g., 'set up recurring giving,' 'join a small group,' 'attend Starting Point class' - pick 1-2, not a laundry list]
- Church personality/vibe: [e.g., 'warm and casual,' 'more traditional and formal,' 'young and energetic']

Deliver the following:

1. Email 1: Immediate Thank-You (sent within 1 hour of the gift)
 - Subject line (3 options)

- Body (150-200 words): Warm, personal, genuinely grateful. Acknowledges this was a meaningful step. Does NOT mention the gift amount. Does NOT immediately ask them to set up recurring giving. Includes a brief line about what their generosity makes possible (one tangible example). Signed personally by the pastor.

2. Email 2: Personal Note from the Pastor (sent 7 days later)

- Subject line (3 options)

- Body (120-175 words): Reads like a real email a pastor would write, not a marketing template. References something current at the church (leave a placeholder for this). Gently introduces ONE next step (not giving- related - a connection step like small groups or a class). No mention of giving in this email at all. The goal is relationship, not retention.

3. Email 3: 30-Day Check-In (sent 30 days after the first gift)

- Subject line (3 options)

- Body (150-200 words): Checks in on their experience at the church. Shares one quick impact story (2-3 sentences) of what generosity funded recently. Now - and only now - gently mentions recurring giving as a convenience option (not a spiritual obligation). Includes a direct link placeholder to the recurring setup page. Closes warmly.

4. Bonus: Handwritten Note Template - a brief template (3-4 sentences) for a physical handwritten card the pastor or a volunteer can send after the first gift. This is the highest-impact touchpoint.

5. Sequence Notes for Your Admin/Tech Team - a brief setup guide explaining timing, triggers, and personalization fields for the giving platform.

Constraints: No 'your investment in the Kingdom' language. No prosperity framing. No implying that giving amount reflects faith level. No pressure to give again in emails 1 or

2. The entire sequence should make someone feel seen as a person, not processed as a transaction.

TRY THIS NEXT

Set up the emails, then put five blank cards on your desk every Monday. The handwritten note is the touchpoint people tell their friends about.

PROMPT 77 - FUNDRAISING & GENEROSITY

Build a Recurring Giving Promotion Campaign

WHEN TO USE

When you want to move more people from one-time giving to recurring giving - the single biggest lever for church financial health - and you need a short, focused campaign that makes the switch feel easy and meaningful.

THE PROMPT

Help me with this ministry task: Build a Recurring Giving Promotion Campaign.

Use the church profile and task details at the end. Work from the information I provide. If an essential detail is missing, ask up to three focused questions before drafting. Do not invent facts, quotations, statistics, stories, dates, policies, platform capabilities, or sources. Clearly label assumptions and anything that needs human verification.

Do not rely on unverified performance claims, current platform features, rankings, prices, statistics, or recent events. Ask for a source or label the item for verification.

Use transparent, non-coercive language. Do not manufacture urgency, impact stories, financial claims, or tax guidance.

I need a 2-week recurring giving promotion campaign. Here's my info:

- Current giving breakdown: [ENTER APPROXIMATE %, e.g., '25% recurring, 75% one-time' or 'we don't track this - help me estimate']
- Giving platform: [e.g., 'Tithe.ly,' 'Planning Center,' 'Pushpay,' 'Church Center,' 'Subsplash']
- Church name: [ENTER NAME]
- Congregation size and demographics: [BRIEF DESCRIPTION]
- Any resistance or concerns to address: [e.g., 'people worry about committing,' 'some prefer cash/check,' 'we tried this before and it fell flat']

Deliver the following:

1. Campaign Theme and Framing - a short internal brief (100 words) explaining how to position this campaign. It's NOT 'we need more money.' It IS 'here's how to simplify your generosity and help us plan better.' Include a campaign name/tagline.
 2. Week 1 Email (250-300 words):
 - Subject line (3 options)
 - Explains WHY recurring giving matters - for the giver (convenience, consistency, no more forgetting) AND for the church (budget stability, better planning, less time talking about money). Use a relatable analogy.
 - Does NOT yet ask them to switch. Week 1 is education and vision-casting.
 - Closes with a teaser for next week's 'how-to.'
 3. Week 2 Email (250-300 words):
 - Subject line (3 options)
 - Now makes the ask: switch to recurring giving (or set it up for the first time)
 - References a brief impact story - 'because of consistent givers, we were able to [specific example]'
 - Includes a step-by-step link to the setup process (placeholder for your giving platform URL)
 - Addresses the top objection ('what if my financial situation changes?') with a reassuring answer
 - Clear, single CTA button text suggestion
 4. Sunday Announcement Script (60-75 seconds, for Week 1 and Week 2) - two separate scripts. Conversational, not preachy. Can be read by a pastor, emcee, or layperson. Week 1 plants the seed, Week 2 makes the ask.
 5. Social Media Post (2 versions):
 - Version A: Analogy-based ('You don't rethink your Netflix subscription every month...')
 - Version B: Impact-based (what consistent giving funds) Both under 150 words. No hashtags.
 6. Step-by-Step Visual Guide Copy - the text content for a one-page PDF or infographic that walks someone through setting up recurring giving on your platform. Write for 5 steps max, assume zero tech confidence. Include suggested screenshot callouts (e.g., 'Screenshot: the screen where you select frequency').
- Constraints: Never imply that one-time givers are less faithful or less committed. No guilt about inconsistency. No 'God loves a cheerful giver' used as a lever. Frame recurring giving as a practical tool that benefits everyone - not a spiritual test. The campaign should feel helpful, not heavy.

TRY THIS NEXT

Run this in January or September, when people are already resetting routines. Reply: "Adjust both emails for a fresh-start angle."
